URGE HEAVY CUT IN AGRICULTURE FUNDS MEASURE

Appropriations Group Cuts Over 10 Million from Budget Figures

NO INCREASES FAVORED

Committee Fails to Consider Question of Reducing Salaries

Washington—(AP)—The keen blade of Democratic economy was exhibited today as the house received from its appropriations committee a closely pruned agriculture department supply bill.

Carrying out the policy laid down by Chairman Byrns, the committee cut the first big departmental money bill to $175,443,000 for the coming fiscal year. This is $50,220,000 less than appropriations for the current year and is $10,799,000 below the budget estimates of $186,242,000 recommended by President Hoover.

Not one budget item was increased by the committee and no single expenditure was added. In addition, the committee did not go into the question of reducing salaries of government employees, a measure that had been debated on the floor since the expenditures committee has tabled all proposals to cut salaries.

The big item in the measure is $100,000,000 for federal highway aid. It is $25,179,000 less than appropriated for this year and $9,000,000 short of the amount requested by Thomas H. Macdonald, chief of the bureau of public roads. The committee also lopped off $595,000 from the appropriation for forest roads and trails, leaving $8,905,000 which is $3,595,000 less than the current year's appropriation.

No New Positions

A restriction was incorporated to prevent the department from filling any vacant jobs during the remainder of the current year except upon the written approval of the president. Other than the cut in federal highway aid, the reductions were effected by slashes of $469,500 on supplies and equipment for various bureaus, and curtailed miscellaneous expenses for the entire department amounting to the remainder of $1,330,000. Increases in salaries during the year were specifically barred.

In its report, the committee said that by administrative action a saving of $3,441,000 already had been effected this year through economies, and not allowing salary increases.

Among the important items in the bill was $13,076,000 for the office of Secretary Hyde, which is $387,000 less than this year, and $83,346 less than the budget estimate; $4,136,000 for the weather bureau, $361,000 less than this year and $53,000 below the budget; $12,250,000 for the animal industry bureau, $759,000 less than this year, and $36,000 below the budget.

Other Estimates

The forest service received $12,133,000, or $4,641,000 less than for 1932, and $213,000 below the budget. The entomology bureau was allowed $2,627,000, a reduction of $238,000 under this year; the biological survey, $1,756,000, or $472,000 less than for 1932; and the bureau of chemists and soils $1,540,000, or $106,000 less than for this year. Food and drug administration received $94,000 less than for this year, of $1,716,000. One of the big savings was $20,000,000 lopped for agricultural credits and rehabilitation and $2,000,000 for loans to farmers in storm and drought areas. The $45,000,000 voted last year by congress for loans was not then included in the regular agriculture department appropriation bill.

Envoy to Japan

JOSEPH C. GREW

Grew Chosen As New U.S. Ambassador

Washington—(AP)—Joseph C. Grew of Hancock, N. H., ambassador to Turkey since 1927, has been determined upon by President Hoover as the next ambassador to Tokyo.

Grew is to succeed W. Cameron Forbes who is expected to relinquish his post in Japan before long, although officials are anxious that he remain for the present in view of the delicate Manchurian situation.

Native of Boston, Grew is a "career man," has spent practically his entire life in the diplomatic service, negotiated a treaty with Turkey back in 1923, has attended various important conferences and represented the United States in responsible posts.

As his successor at Ankara, capital of Turkey, is being mentioned Jefferson Caffery, now minister to Colombia, also known as an able diplomat. For the still more important vacancy coming in the spring, the London ambassadorship, former Senator Lawrence C. Phillips of Colorado is being strongly advocated. He would succeed Charles G. Dawes who has announced his intention of resigning before even the Geneva general conference on disarmament is over. He is chairman of the American delegation at that parity.

The other outstanding appointment to be made by President Hoover the one to fill a vacancy on the supreme court left by the resignation of Oliver Wendell Holmes, finds the chief executive still weighing a list, somewhat reduced from its original 20 names, but still lengthy.

THREE ADMIT THEFTS FROM FREIGHT CARS

Racine—(AP)—Three men held in jail have confessed, Sheriff J. H. Anderson said today, to a series of thefts from freight cars that began in November. They are Homer Pittman, 30, of Berryville; Francis Richmond, 34, of Racine, and Charles Mengler, 39, of Kenosha.

Sheriff Anderson said he searched the home of one and found overcoats, electrical supplies, building material, automobile tires, tubes of lard and boxes of candy.

The men told him, the sheriff said, that they stole most of the stuff while the cars were in motion. Using a rope ladder, fastened to the top of the car, they hung over the side and broke into the cars.

REDS TRY TO LYNCH PRISONERS IN SPAIN

Bilbao, Spain—(AP)—A mob of 5,000 Communists besieged the jail today in an attempt to lynch 41 Catholic prisoners as the first outbreak in a general strike.

Thirty artillerymen stood off the crowd with guns and sabers ready. Prison authorities released two Communist prisoners to appease the rioters, who marched away, waving the red flag and singing the Internationale.

Authorities believed the strike, which originated between Catholics and anti-Catholics yesterday, had spread throughout the nearby mining district, but communications were poor.

AID TELLS OF LOAN BUT SAYS IT WAS LEGAL

House Committee Told Treasury Head Has Not Violated Federal Law

Washington—(AP)—Secretary Mellon's answer to impeachment charges was concluded before the house judiciary committee today but they were immediately renewed by his accuser, Representative Wright Patman of Texas.

Alexander W. Gregg, representing the secretary of treasury, made a sweeping disavowal of all the charges, submitted to questions by committee members and indicated his willingness to be questioned by Patman.

Such procedure, however, was ruled out of order by Chairman Sumners on the suggestion of Representative Dyer, Missouri, Republican. It was agreed, however, that Patman might suggest questions to committee members for propounding to Gregg.

Washington—(AP)—A loan by Secretary Mellon of his personal securities to the Union Gulf corporation was described to the house judiciary committee by the treasury head's representative, Alexander W. Gregg. He said it was entirely legal.

Representative Patman, Texas Democrat, who seeks Mellon's impeachment on charges he has engaged in business in violation of law, had presented the stock transaction as evidence to support his contention.

Gregg said Mellon had supplied part of the securities loaned to the Union Gulf corporation to be used as collateral for a bond issue.

"It was a straight loan for a consideration and did not constitute engaging in business," Gregg said.

Chairman Sumners questioned Gregg, who opened his argument last Friday, on the application of the law on stock ownership.

"I think it would depend on how active the stockholder was," Gregg replied. "If he continued to run a company he would be barred whether he owned 99 or one per cent of the stock. Mr. Mellon has not taken on any active part. He does not own control in any corporation."

Not at Meetings

"Mr. Mellon has never attended even a stockholders' meeting of any corporation since he has been secretary. He has given his proxy."

Sumners asked Gregg whether the bank stock Mellon had disposed of when taking office was now held by any individual in one block.

"I can't answer that," Gregg said. "I don't know; but there are no strings to it."

Gregg was asked to supply the ownership of this bank stock and said he would do so. To further questions he said the disposition of Mellon's bank stock had probably

NEW STANDARD OIL PROXY WAR FORECAST

Stockholders' Committee Is Seeking Control for Election in March

New York—(AP)—Another Standard Oil proxy war loomed today. A stockholders' committee, composed of Lionel T. Barneson, Cyrus Bell and C. B. Wrightsman, has written a letter to share owners of the Standard Oil Co. of Kansas soliciting proxies for the annual meeting which takes place the second Wednesday in March.

"Since the withdrawal of the Rockefeller interests many years ago," the letter states, "the management of the company has been handed down from year to year to a group holding a relatively negligible amount of the company's stock."

"Under this management... little or no progress has been made by the company."

"The management has been content to let matters drift and is not taking the steps necessary to maintain the relative position of the company in the face of ever increasing competition or to develop great possibilities of its exceptionally advantageous geographical situation."

The last big proxy battle was waged in Standard Oil of Indiana in 1929 between John D. Rockefeller, Jr. and Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board. The Rockefeller interests emerged victorious and Stewart quit as chairman and director.

Drys Cheer Hoover For His Stand On Prohibition Law

Anti-Saloon League Group Applauds Him as "Convinced, Sincere Dry"

Washington—(AP)—A declaration that "we have a convinced and sincere dry in the White House," brought delegates to the Anti-Saloon league's biennial meeting to their feet today with an outburst of cheering.

The Rev. John M. Phillips of Hartford, Conn., made the statement. "There are enough people in the United States to see that we do not have anything else but a convinced and sincere dry there," Phillips added.

The assailed Senator Bingham, Republican, the author of a bill to legalize beer, said: "If anybody can make the wet side look ridiculous, Senator Bingham will. There is a great sentiment in Connecticut that all sons of the wild jackasses do not come from west of the Mississippi."

He called the Crusaders, an anti-prohibition organization, "a bunch of knights of malt and bourbon," and called upon the league to redouble efforts to educate the youths of America against liquor use.

"But we can hold the fort until the Dupont brothers and John J. Raskob get tired of throwing their money away," he said.

He spoke after I. W. Pierce of Montreal, had told the league "government control is a colossal failure" in Canada.

Pierce, secretary of the League Against Alcoholism of the Province of Quebec, added "but we cannot find an avenue to express our discontent."

A. H. Jarvis of Ottawa, member of the executive committee of the Ottawa branch of the Ontario Prohibition union, presented data from several provinces designed to show liquor consumption and bootlegging had increased greatly in the last few years.

Louis J. Taber, master of the National Grange, told the league "we must choose between prohibition or the saloon and the farmers as I know them from the Atlantic to the Pacific will stand firm for prohibition."

"This is no time to take a backward step in prohibition or in law observance," Taber said. "The return of the saloon means to turn back the pages of moral progress, national greatness and welfare."

"Those who ask for beer and booze are not asking for dope or narcotics and yet they should be treated along similar lines."

"The weakness of those who believe in the eighteenth amendment and prohibition is that we have stopped too soon our educational program."

Mount Sterling, Ky.—(AP)—Motions for new trials for William Hightower and William B. Jones, Harlan county mine union leaders, were overruled by Circuit Judge Henry R. Prewitt here today and they were formally sentenced to life imprisonment. Counsel announced the cases would be carried at once to the Kentucky Court of Appeals.

Jones, secretary of the local union in Harlan county, and Hightower, its president, were convicted of murder conspiracy as a result of a clash during last year's strike in which four men were shot to death at Everts.

Judge Prewitt reviewed the trials at length and asked Jones if he had anything to say before sentence was pronounced. Jones replied:

"This is the first time in the annals of American history that a man has ever been convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment for being patriotic and trying to get the people to obey the law."

"I naturally feel sorry for anybody that gets sentenced to prison," replied the judge. "I did my best to give you a fair trial."

Judge Prewitt then passed sentence, and turning to Hightower who was convicted last week, asked if he had anything to say.

"No," was his reply, and his sentence was formally passed.

BANK REFORMS SUGGESTED BY GOV. MURRAY

Oklahoma Governor Privileged Witness Before Ways and Means Group

Washington—(AP)—Sitting at ease with a cigar and black coat at hand, "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, otherwise the governor of Oklahoma, counseled congress today to institute banking reforms.

He testified before the house ways and means committee, introduced by Representative McKee, a fellow Democrat of his state.

McKeown is sponsor of a bill to remove the 10 per cent tax on state bank note issues which was first presented about 15 years ago by Murray when he was a house member.

The bill seeks to repeal the law in order that the so-called "Scotch" banks in states could issue notes on stored agricultural and similar products.

Chairman Collier and the other committee members accorded the plainwreathed Oklahoma executive unusual courtesy. As McKee concluded his introduction, he said the witness "may have to drink some coffee because he hasn't had all of his morning coffee yet."

Murray obtained permission to sit down and talk in support of the McKee bill. Such permission had been granted but once before and then to Secretary Mellon when he was ill.

"Takes It Easy"

Leaning back in an easy swivel chair, Murray crossed his legs—exposing white cotton socks and high laced shoes—and began a detailed discussion of "the central and Scotch bank systems in England" and the central or federal reserve banking system in the United States.

Harry, the Negro janitor for the ways and means committee for 41 years, brought in two pots of coffee and one cup and placed them before the governor.

Without interrupting his discourse, Murray jerked forward and poured the cup full to the brim with black coffee.

At the outset, he stressed that the constitution empowers congress "to coin money, not to issue money, as many seem to think. He added that since the coining of money had been denied the states and that since the Scotch banking system had been abolished in 1875, the existing central banking system had drained the agricultural regions of money."

Puffing and frequently lighting a fat cigar, Murray said the British central banking system was bolstered by "the Scotch banking system" and that unless the latter were revived in this country the agricultural regions would be drained dry.

"12 Central Banks"

He said that while England had one central bank the United States had 12, referring to the 12 federal reserve banks. He contended that for the most part, members of the reserve bank and who "never produce anything."

The federal reserve board should consist of 12 of money and not speculation, he declared, and one-fourth of them should be producers, one-fourth manufacturers, one-fourth representatives of transportation and one-fourth agriculturists.

Explaining the "Scotch" system, Murray said it meant that the banking arrangements and that it does not require prior indication on which to base notes. Under it, state banks in the past could issue currency on products stored in warehouses or otherwise held as security against the currency instead of on gold, silver or gold used by the federal reserve system.

Murray pointed out that under the federal reserve system, currency is issued on obligations and that securities were favored by the reserve bank as credit instead of the products of agriculture and industry.

PROHIBITION OFFICERS KILL GEORGIA FARMER

Dallas, Ga.—(AP)—Lee Crow, 64-year-old farmer of the Newhope section was shot and killed during the raiding of a still near his home by prohibition officers yesterday.

Jack M. Cox, sheriff from Cartersville, Gordon Rivers and John McGowan, federal officers from Atlanta, compelling the raiding party, said they found Crow and another man, Virgil Aiken, at the still site.

Aiken was arrested, but the farmer fled, officers said. He was over taken by Rogers who called to McCoy for aid. Rogers said the farmer was shot and fatally wounded during a struggle that followed. Crow had a gun, the officers said, but it was not fired.

Sheriff W. Mitchell ordered an investigation and said the raiding officers would be arrested.

WORKERS' CHIEF SLAIN

Seville, Spain—(AP)—Jose Sanchez, president of the Shop Workers' union, was shot and killed today by 14 persons described as Communists by authorities.

TWO PLAN TO FLY FROM OSHKOSH TO NORWAY NEXT MAY

Oshkosh—(AP)—Clyde Lee, 23-year-old Oshkosh aviator and Julius Robertson, 20, Neenah, Wis., today announced they plan a $300 mile trans Atlantic flight from Oshkosh to Oslo, Norway, to start early in May. The flight is being sponsored by Robertson and other Neenah residents. A cabin monoplane is being rebuilt for the flight. Lee has been a pilot since he was 17 years old.

Rush Action On Hoover's Relief Bill

Washington—(AP)—Spokesmen for the senate and house collaborated today toward speeding adjustment of parliamentary difficulties that are delaying the economic relief program.

The senate took up the $2,000,000,000 reconstruction bill for the second time. A conference will be held to reconcile differences between the two congressional branches, and soon thereafter the legislation will be ready for President Hoover.

Such a conference already is under way on the bill to help the federal land banks. The conference agreed this morning to a senate amendment for a $25,000,000 increase to be tacked onto the $100,000,000 which the house voted for increasing the capital of these banks.

The sum added by the senate was expressly earmarked for use in extending farm mortgage payments at the discretion of the banks in needy areas.

Several points connected with the wording of the extension clause remained to be threshed out later in the day when the conference between representatives of the two houses recessed.

A short while after meeting, the senate took up the house version of the reconstruction bill—Senator Walcott, Republican, Connecticut, moving the formality of substituting the measure previously passed by the senate.

Senator Copeland, Democrat, New York, offered an amendment to include cities within the scope of the legislation.

Senator Couzens, Republican, Michigan, demanded reading of the bill to ascertain differences in the two measures.

LAVAL CONSIDERS STAND ON PARLEY

French Premier in Doubt About Action on Conference at Lausanne

Paris—(AP)—Premier Laval, who presents his new cabinet to parliament tomorrow for a vote of confidence, spent today considering the possibility of opening the proposed debts conference at Lausanne next Monday.

Although no definite announcement of policy has been made, it is believed the British are swinging over to the French side, of a short memorandum to break over the elections in the United States, France and Prussia, provided the United States consents to a similar brief holiday on war debts. Then the whole question would be discussed toward the end of the year.

If the French and British agree, Germany's creditors at Lausanne would lay the whole problem on Germany's doorstep by explaining to the German people that action they are willing to extend a permanent moratorium if the United States will approve a war debts holiday.

The crew of both boats escaped.

2 ALTERNATIVES NOW REMAINING, GOVERNOR SAYS

Question Between Taxing Dividends and Sen. Goodland's Proposal

WANT DEFINITE ACTION

LaFollette Fails to Commit Self on His Stand on Goodland Bill

Madison—(AP)—Governor LaFollette said today that the issue between Progressives and conservatives in the matter of financing an unemployment relief bill had, in his opinion, been boiled down to the alternatives of taxing dividends along with other incomes or accepting the Goodland proposal for 1931 surtaxes based on the three year average.

The governor threw some light on the nature of the conversations he had with Senator George Blanchard of Edgerton, in which conservatives initiated a move to get the two factions together so that the special session of the legislature might adjourn this week.

The compromise negotiations had not yielded definite results so far as could be learned today but it was believed conservative senators would meet here in advance of the opening to tomorrow's legislative sessions to discuss their course.

Senator Blanchard, reached at Edgerton, declined to comment.

Silent on Goodland Bill

In a statement to newspapermen the governor said he believed a dividend tax necessary to reach the higher incomes but he did not reveal what he would do if the Goodland bill were passed and sent to his desk.

The LaFollette administration's conversation with Senator Blanchard, he said, was that the conservatives are agreed a relief bill should be passed and that none of the cost should be placed on general property.

Details of financing then were discussed and the governor said that budgets figures in his possession showed that any money taken from the general fund for 1932 would be replaced in the same year, or the cash condition of the general fund would be such that a state property levy in 1933 would be locally mandatory. He advised Senator Blanchard to consult James H. Borden, budget director, on this question.

The governor asserted that he considered the three year average basis of computing the surtaxes in the Goodland bill to be a harsh feature because it would hit corporations hard. It increases the normal income taxes of individuals and corporations 50 per cent.

Goodland's Proposal

The Goodland plan would return to the general fund in 1932 all the money it takes out as the administration proposals do. Previous compromise proposals by conservatives and independents proposed to return the money in two years, 1932 and 1933 and to the administration objected, with the result that they could not get through the assembly.

A new administration bill for $10,000,000 is now pending before the assembly and the body is likely to pass it, holding back the Goodland bill at the same time for future action if a compromise is not reached.

It is much the same as previous Progressive bills except that it raises the exemptions and allows one million specifically for forestry. It taxes dividends and does not permit deduction of capital losses in determining the one to 20 per cent surtaxes on incomes. It does not tax corporations.

Waives Hearing on Poisoning Charges

Mrs. Mary Corcoran Demands Immediate Trial in Murder of Husband

Madison—(AP)—Through her attorney, Lawrence W. Hall, Mrs. Mary Corcoran today waived preliminary hearing and demanded an immediate trial on charges of murder in connection with the poison liquor death of her husband, James, on Nov. 27.

Superior Judge S. B. Shein tentatively set the date for Feb. 15 upon the plea of Special Prosecutor Carl N. Hilt that the state would require a month to complete preparation of its case.

Attorneys for Fay Hammersley, Sr., also charged with the slaying, asked for a delay in the appearance of their client, stating they would decide later if they would waive hearing.

Hall said he planned to ask that Mrs. Corcoran be tried separately, that she be admitted to bail and that her case be heard outside the county. Both Hammersley and Mrs. Corcoran are held in jail without bond.

Nine Dead, Six Wounded In Kentucky Feuds And Family Quarrels

FOUR KILLED AS 2 CLANS REVIVE ANCIENT STRIFE

One Slain, Second Wounded in Duel—Sheriff Shot Down at Prison

Louisville, Ky.—(AP)—Feudal strife and family quarrels flared in Kentucky over the weekend and a series of pistol fights left nine dead and six wounded.

A church meeting at New Salem, in the foothills of the Cumberland, took four lives but left the death count unchanged in a long standing feud between the Crook and Johnson families. Two brothers of the Johnson clan and two of the Crook men were slain late Saturday in a renewal of a disagreement over the 17-year-old sister of the Crooks. Another of the Johnson men was wounded slightly and their cousin was wounded critically.

The dead were: Homer Crook, Forest Crook, Henry Johnson and Earl Johnson. Willie Johnson was wounded slightly and his cousin Henry Johnson was reported dying early today in a London hospital. The men fought when Willie Johnson was accused of wronging the Crook girl.

Over in adjoining Knox-co, two men grasped hands and fought a duel to settle an old quarrel. One was killed and the other wounded critically. They met on Cold Creek, 15 miles back in the mountains and a man named Gambrell was killed and Walter Smith was shot three times. He was in a Pineville hospital unable to give any details of the duel.

Sheriff N. J. Tipton of Rockcastle-co, a few miles away, was shot to death in a argument with Hunter Burchell, a guard at the state reformatory at Frankfort. The men had been enemies for some time.

Hayden McFarlin shot and killed his wife, Mrs. Zedna McFarlin, wounded his brother-in-law, Harry Gregory and then committed suicide at Franklin. The McFarlin's had been estranged.

At Bowling Green, J. Warren, roadhouse owner, was accused of the shotgun slaying of Hugh Beckham. Authorities said Warren shot Beckham in an attempt to break up an argument between Beckham and another customer.

Noah Johnson and Willie May Adams disagreed on the street at Heller, Pike-co and both were shot in the pistol play that followed. Johnson was wounded seriously.

RAIL GROUPS DEBATE VARIOUS PROPOSALS

Conferences Between Executives, Union Leaders in Morning Session

Chicago—(AP)—The conference between railway presidents and brotherhood and union leaders was in recess this morning to give both sides more time to study the differences arising from the discussion of stabilization of employment and other proposals made by the labor group.

Although both sides insisted nothing definite had been decided, indications were the managements were unfavorable to some portions of the labor program, although friendly to other proposals.

The labor program was advanced as a counter proposal to the suggestion of a voluntary 10 per cent wage reduction with the implication that if the presidents agree to it, or a large part of it, labor would be willing to take the wage cut for one year.

The unions asked, among other things, that the roads promise full time employment to at least a minimum force for one year and a definite amount of employment to "stand-by" forces. It was understood this was one of the matters referred to when the labor spokesmen said "on some things they (the presidents) did not go as far as we hoped they would."

The attitude of the presidents regarding the six hour day was believed to be even less satisfactory to the union heads, the labor group had asked that a commission be formed to study the ways and means of applying the six hour day to the railway industry but it was reported that the presidents reiterated the usual objections of the management.

EX-REP. LANGLEY DIES IN KENTUCKY

Member of Congress for 19 Years—Served Sentence on Dry Law Charge

Pikeville, Ky.—(AP)—Hill folk from the eastern highlands of Kentucky trudged into Pikeville today to pay final tribute to the "great friend of the mountains."

John W. Langley, the man who represented them in congress for 19 years only to slip into political oblivion after serving part of a two-year sentence for conspiracy to violate the national prohibition laws, died here yesterday. He was ill three days with pneumonia.

Langley, himself a mountaineer, was 69 years old and boasted that in his lifetime he "never missed an opportunity to defend our beloved mountain." He was elected to congress from the Tenth Kentucky district 10 times, once while he was awaiting action on his appeal on the liquor charge. He was succeeded by his wife, Mrs. Katherine Langley who was defeated for reelection by A. J. May.

Langley, a Republican, was tried and convicted in 1925 of having conspired to draw and sell illegally 1,400 cases of bonded whiskey from the Belle of Anderson distillery at Lawrenceburg, Ky. His sentence was fixed at two years and he entered the Atlanta penitentiary in January of 1926. He was paroled in December of the same year and a few days later President Coolidge granted a full pardon with restoration of citizenship.

Mrs. Langley was defeated in 1930. Langley, always claimed he was sent to prison on trumped up charges. He said he was "stabbed in the back by men I've helped along in life," and termed his prison sentence "the final chapter in my martyrdom."

After his release he wrote a book in which he condemned those he thought responsible for his imprisonment.

MISS MC CARTHY IS HEAD OF COMMITTEE

Miss Blanche McCarthy, Appleton high school teacher, was chosen chairman of the state committee of local relationships at the executive board meeting of the Wisconsin Teachers' association Friday night in Milwaukee. Miss McCarthy was president of the state teachers' group last year, turning her office over to C. J. Brewer of Eau Claire at the board of directors meeting.

It was decided to weave the program of next year's convention around the new philosophy of education in Wisconsin, worked out by the Teachers' Training council this past year. Both Herbert H. Helble, principal of Appleton high school, and Prof. Richard B. Thiel of Lawrence college are members of the council. The Teachers' Training council met Friday night in Milwaukee, with O. H. Plenske presenting the convention theme before chairman of the convention sections at their meeting Saturday morning. Local teachers in charge of sectional programs at the meeting include Dr. M. H. Small, principal of Wilson junior high school; Herbert H. Helble, representing high schools in the state; Mrs. Jessie Collins, head of the Orthopedic section; Miss Anna Sullivan, chairman of the corrective speech group.

CHINESE BADLY BEATEN AS JAPS AVENGE LOSSES

Tokio Forces Retaliate for Defeats and Heavy Casualties Last Week

Copyright, 1932, Associated Press
Mukden, Manchuria—(AP)—Hundreds of Chinese have paid with their lives, Japanese official communiques said today, for the victories they won last week when Japanese casualties ran high.

The communiques told a grim tale of the crashing of the Japanese mailed fist in retaliation, wielding all the most destructive engines of modern war. The announcements were made almost simultaneously with the arrival here of the advance guard of the new groups of Chinese war lords under whom it is proposed to erect a new Manchurian state.

General Shigeru Honjo, Japanese commander, drove his retaliatory thrusts at several widely separated points in south Manchuria. In two battles at Yentai and Tungliang at least 220 Chinese were known to have been killed and the communiques said "a considerable number" were slain at Yingchow in a third battle. These were only the three most important clashes listed in the announcements.

One Japanese officer was killed and three men wounded in the Yingchow battle.

The largest of yesterday's battles was at Yentai, a coal-mining center 25 miles south of here. A Japanese infantry battalion using machine guns, artillery and airplanes clashed with 500 Chinese. The fighting lasted 40 minutes. The first official report said the Chinese were "almost completely annihilated." The battalion returned here afterward. A gang of coolies was hired to dispose of the bodies of the dead.

Face Execution
The wounded were taken to Japanese hospitals. Those who recovered will be turned over to the Chinese authorities for what probably will be certain execution.

The bodies of 30 Chinese, dead were left in a village 10 miles west of Tungliang. Reports were received that 1,000 Chinese were looting the village and an infantry company was sent from Tungliang. Twenty-two prisoners were taken in this battle.

At Yingchow a part of a Japanese infantry stationed there entered several hundred Chinese. It was here the Japanese officer was killed and the three Japanese soldiers wounded. The Chinese dead was given as "a considerable number."

A brigade sent to smash the irregulars in the Shunshi district Saturday returned to Chinchow and reported its mission completed.

First of the Chinese war lords to arrive for the conference on the formation of a new state was Chang Hai-Peng, who tried and failed to oust General Ma Chan-Shan from Tatsihar before General Jiro Tamon undertook and accomplished the task.

Chang Ching-Hui, governor at Harbin is expected Wednesday reliable sources said.

Student Lawyers Plan To Fight Campus Court Up To State Supreme Tribunal

Madison—(AP)—Led by four student lawyers, a number of undergraduates at the University of Wisconsin today were in open rebellion against the Badger campus traffic court and planned to carry their fight to the state supreme court—if they can raise enough money.

The students said they hoped the rebellion would spread to other schools, where fines are collected from students for violation of campus rules.

The four law students, members of Phi Delta Phi professional law fraternity, today dug through law books as they collected precedents which they said uphold their position that the fine system is unconstitutional and illegal.

This rather unusual picture of four fraternity brothers diligently poring over books is occasioned by the recent appointment by President Glenn Frank of a court to hear cases of students accused of violating the campus automobile traffic rules. The appointments were not approved by the board of regents.

"That is unnecessary," Dr. Frank said.

Professors Ray S. Owen and William A. Sumner and Albert F. Galistel, superintendent of buildings and grounds, make up the court. At the court's initial session last Wednesday $1 fines were assessed against six students. Those who ignored traffic tickets drew double fines.

Students' Campaign
The court meets again Wednesday and the law students are acting as counsel for all students who apply.

"We have four cases for Wednesday," the law students said, "we're going to plead guilty, pay each fine under protest, and then in a civil action in the Dane-co courts, sue to get the money back. Also, we expect to institute an injunction move in circuit court to halt further operation of the court."

The students maintain the court is illegally appointed; that it does not have constitutional authority to levy and collect fines and that it infringes upon the jurisdiction of municipal courts.

"This body isn't even a court," said the law students. "A court is a body empowered by the governor or by statute to hear evidence and deliver judgments under law. The laws always demark the limits of the judgment."

"In this so-called court, the three judges have unlimited fining powers. The code under which they reportedly operates does not set up a system of fines. In fact if they wish, their fines can exceed even those of the state statutes."

"If we win our fight, perhaps the students of universities where automobiles are prohibited will take a trip and fight the illegal orders depriving them of their automobiles."

"Anyway," said a member of the law faculty, "the boys are getting good legal training."

John Hancock's signature on the Declaration of Independence was so large that his name has been synonymous with signature ever since.

FOOD FOR INDIANS IS DROPPED BY PLANES

Army Bombing Ships Fly Low Over Villages to Supply Provisions

Winslow, Ariz.—(AP)—Six huge army bombing planes, carrying cargoes of provisions in place of explosives, today sought remote Zuni and Navajo villagers in the canyons and on the mesas of western New Mexico as targets for their "food bombardment."

Sixteen larger snowbound Indian villages already have been provisioned by the bombers. The planes, flying at the dangerously low altitude of 50 feet, yesterday dropped more than five tons of food in snow banks near the villages.

It had been estimated more than 20,000 redmen, isolated by one of the heaviest snows this section has ever known, faced starvation. Indian department officials in Washington ordered relief sent the tribesmen by air.

Carrying annotated maps, the bombing planes, provisioned anew, took off today to seek the smaller settlements. Holbrook was designated base of operations.

The aviators reported to Lieut. Charles H. Howard, in charge of the flight, that crowds of Indians gathered eagerly yesterday as the big bombers swooped low. The provisions consisted of beans, flour, coffee, sugar, salt pork and dried fruit.

Wisconsin Michigan Power Co.

APPLETON NEENAH

PHONE CO. TO SPEND $186,000 HERE THIS YEAR

Complete Plans for Extensions and Improvements for 1932 Program

Plans for extensions, improvements and replacements by the Wisconsin Telephone Co. in Appleton in 1932 will require an expenditure of $186,000, according to H. M. Felows, manager of the Appleton exchange. The appropriation is part of the expenditure of $720,000 for additions to the telephone system throughout Wisconsin this year.

In anticipation of an increase in the use of local and long distance service here, the company's construction program provides for an expenditure of $67,000 for additional local and long distance central office equipment.

Outside plant will be supplemented by the installation of additional aerial and underground cable. An expenditure of $90,000 is required for this work. Other additions to plant and installation of subscribers' instruments and associated equipment involve an expenditure of $29,000.

An increase of 169 subscribers' telephones was made locally during 1931. The Appleton exchange now serves 3,730 telephones.

Long Distance Lines

Important among the telephonic accomplishments locally during the past year were the placing in service of the new long distance central office on W. Washington street and the placing in service of the long distance cable between here and Stevens Point.

During the past year, throughout Wisconsin, customers of the company made approximately 571,800,000 local calls and 14,100,000 long distance calls. Of this number, Appleton subscribers made 16,451,095 local calls and 301,360 inter-city calls. The daily average for 1931 was 1,747,000 local calls and 39,400 long distance calls.

The Wisconsin Telephone Co. is providing telephone service to 355,675 telephones. Five hundred six connecting companies and associations whose lines inter-connect with the toll line system of the company provide service to 193,800 additional telephones, making the total number of telephones in Wisconsin 559,475 at the end of the year.

A communication service of far reaching significance made available during the year in the Bell System teletypewriter service. Private teletypewriter service has been provided for many years. The feature of the new service is that it permits any teletypewriter subscriber to send written messages to any other subscriber to this service. The messages typed on the machines can pass in either direction between any two subscribers both intra-city and inter-city.

Radio Service

Radio-telephone service is now available to 26 European countries. In 1931, all telephones in Italy and Roumania were added to extend the scope of transatlantic service. Other extensions of the service were made to the Islands of Java and Sumatra in the Dutch East Indies; to Brazil and South America; to the Hawaiian Islands, and to Bermuda in the West Indies. Ninety-one per cent of the world's telephones can be inter-connected with any of the 20,000,000 telephones in the United States through the network of Bell System toll lines and radio telephone channels.

WIRES ON FIRE

The fire department was called to 811 W. Franklin street about 7:10 Sunday evening when wires on a Wisconsin Michigan Power company line started to burn. Passersby noticed the flames and called the department. No serious damage resulted.

Dr. Preston Bradley Well Known for Radio Talks from Chicago

Hundreds of people in Appleton and vicinity who have turned their radio dials to Chicago to hear one of the most interesting and vigorous speakers in America will have an opportunity to see him Friday evening, Jan. 22.

The man is Dr. Preston Bradley, president of the Izaak Walton League of America, and pastor of Peoples church, Chicago. He comes to Appleton at the invitation of the local chapter of the Izaak Walton league and is scheduled to speak at Lawrence Memorial chapel.

Admission to the chapel is to be free but will be by ticket. The local Walton chapter is distributing tickets to all who want them. Tickets can be obtained from any league member or from E. W. Shannon, secretary. In addition to the address there will be a concert by Appleton high school band under the direction of E. C. Moore. The concert will begin at 7:45 and the address will be at 8:15. Judge Henry Grass, Green Bay, will introduce the speaker. Boy scouts will act as ushers.

Dr. Bradley is one of the original 54 founders of the Izaak Walton League of America. He is an ardent fisherman and outdoor fan and spends three months out of every year in his log cabin in the north woods. He is considered one of the most fluent and successful speakers on outdoor subjects in the United States and audiences all over the country have enjoyed his addresses. He is widely known for his conservation work in the Mississippi valley and also through his pastoral work in the Peoples church of Chicago which he founded in 1912 and now is in a building costing $750,000.

Outagamie county rural and graded schools have been apportioned tickets to be distributed two to each room teacher and two to a boy and girl in the upper grades of each school. The applications are being handled through A. G. Meating, county superintendent of schools.

WORK ON PLAN TO ELIMINATE RADIO TROUBLE

Would Synchronize Stations of High Power in Same Channels

BY ROBERT MACK Copyright, 1932, By Cons. Press

Washington—(CPA)—Synchronization of broadcasting stations of high power on the same channel as a means of alleviating congestion in the broadcast band is still viewed as "in the laboratory stage" by engineers of the federal radio commission.

While the commission itself has not yet affirmed this view it has expressed doubt as to the status of the process, which, it is hoped, ultimately will permit a substantial increase in the number of stations on the air and make possible the presentation of more diversified programs. Thursday the commission heard concluding arguments respecting the synchronization experiments of the National Broadcasting Co. with stations WBAL, Baltimore and WTIC, Hartford, Conn. These stations for nearly a year have been synchronized during regular program hours with WJVE and WEAJ, respectively, the N. B. C. key stations in New York, to permit them to operate full time as against their regular one-half time assignments.

At the hearings the commission sought information upon which it may determine whether the experiments should be permitted to continue.

Many Complaints

Many complaints have been received from listeners against interference which has developed from the synchronized operation, and the commission's engineering division has not been satisfied with the results. It contends that a material loss of service to a substantial portion of the public has resulted.

Andrew D. Ring, allocation engineer, in substance, testified that high-power station synchronization is still a subject for laboratory experimentation and should be permitted on the air during regular program hours. He said that synchronization appears to be successful on "regional" channels, where stations of low power may operate simultaneously, and, by exercising extreme care, avoid ruinous interference. But he added that many problems confront high-power synchronization, such as that undertaken by the N. B. C. stations, and that they should be solved "step by step rather than whole hog."

Clear channels, Mr. Ring pointed out, are assigned for the exclusive use of high power stations during evening hours as a means of providing maximum service to remote listeners. By attempting to synchronize stations on clear channels, they become "regional" channels with high power stations on them and their service ranges are cut down appreciably. WEAJ and WTIC are licensed for the maximum power of 50,000 watts, but when synchronized have been forced to curtail their power. WBAL is licensed for 10,000 watts, and WJVE for 30,000 watts. Power reductions in these cases also have been necessary.

Counsel for the network and the stations contended that only during regular program hours do ideal conditions prevail for synchronization experiments, and that the commission should not arbitrarily end this week before a real opportunity is afforded for tests. At least another year is declared by them as essential to work out the scientific problems presented.

BASKETBALL PLAYER SLAIN BY POLICEMAN

Shot to Death as He Tries to Join Dance in Chicago Community Hall

Chicago—(AP)—Louis Lakin, 15, who captured a high school basketball team, was shot to death last night by Alexander Roney, 50, a sports policeman, at a community hall.

The shooting came out of an attempt by Lakin and a dozen companions to join a dance in the community hall. Some of them had secured a fire escape, and were ordered down by Roney. Julius Ekeles, a junior college student, told police Roney fired pointblank. Roney, however, said the weapon was accidentally discharged during a scuffle with the youths.

Two other youths were reported to have died from pistol wounds inflicted by an "unlabeled" weapon. Heavily increasing the number of casualties from such gunplay in Chicago recently, Angelo Spiros shot his brother John. When Martin Spiros attempted to snatch the pistol from Angelo's hand it exploded again, wounding Martin in the abdomen. Both may die hospital attaches said.

Among other recent shootings with "unlabeled" pistols was the killing of a school girl by a boy companion who was demonstrating how one of their boy chums had slain a girl and killed himself earlier the same day.

Hoover Reelection Predicted By Glover At Postmasters' Meeting

BUT POSTAL MEN MUST GIVE AID, HE POINTS OUT

Mobilize Forces Now for Republican Party, Glover Declares

President Herbert Hoover will be reelected to office by a greater majority of votes next fall than he received four years ago, W. Irving Glover, Washington, D. C., second assistant postmaster general of the United States, told 350 postmasters from throughout Wisconsin at a dinner meeting at Conway hotel here Saturday night.

The meeting was arranged under auspices of the newly organized Fox River Valley Postmasters' Club. With the second assistant postal chief as the principal speaker, the attendance at Saturday's meeting far exceeded that of any convention of state postmasters' organizations. Representatives from every postmasters association in the state were present.

Assuring his audience that first, second and third class postmasters are not under civil service and are under no restrictions to keep out of politics, Mr. Glover told postal executives in those divisions, that it is time they rolled up their sleeves and entered the fight for their party and in support of the nation's present chief.

Discussing the approaching presidential election, Mr. Glover said that in his opinion there is no outstanding candidate on whom the Democrats agree can defeat President Hoover.

Mobilize, He Urges
Declaring that postmasters owe allegiance to the Republican party because it secured them their jobs, the speaker said it was time they mobilized their forces and started singing the praises of the party.

Vigorously flaying those people who blame Hoover for the economic depression and unemployment situation, Mr. Glover said that the president had done more for the nation than any man can do to turn business on the up grade.

He said he believed President Hoover a victim of circumstances, and that the black clouds of depression and unemployment were already rolling over the United States before Mr. Hoover took office. He said that no other president since the administration of Abraham Lincoln had suffered as much as President Hoover.

"Go past the White House any night after 9 o'clock and you'll see a light in Mr. Hoover's room, where he sits for hours devising plans for the return of peace and prosperity," Mr. Glover said. The speaker said it is his opinion that prosperity will return in 1932 in leaps and bounds, and in the same manner as the depression overtook the nation.

Reassuring his audience that Hoover "will win the next election," Mr. Glover said that loyal American people will never crucify President Hoover on the cross of sacrifice.

Dismissing department finances, Mr. Glover said he does not believe congress will grant the postmaster general's request for an increase in postage to wipe out the deficit of $100,000,000. He said he believed there is more likelihood of the increase being put through by attaching the provision to a revenue bill and have the increased revenue paid directly into the treasury rather than over to the postal department.

Rising demands for more efficient service extension of service via air and water to all parts of the world, increases in salaries and shorter hours were blamed for the deficit. He claimed, however, that part of the deficit does not rightly belong to the postal department but should be charged to the commerce department.

Lauding the work of the post-office department, Mr. Glover said the department conducts the largest single industry in the world. He said the postal department is the pulse of the nation.

Praises Airmail
Mr. Glover praised the work of the airmail division. He attributed to the many flyers who soar through the skies carrying messages from people throughout the world.

"America's finest young men today are flying the airmail," he said. "It takes brave young men to fly alone over land and sea by day and by night—but they know their flying."

"There is considerable difference in the flying of airmail as compared with the other methods of transporting mail. By rail, the engineer always has the fireman for a companion, by boat the captain with his lace and spangles has other officers on the bridge with him, ready to take command if something happens to him—but the boy who flies the airmail has the greatest responsibility. He soars through the sky alone through all kinds of weather—carrying announcements of births and the familiar black bordered cards."

2 Afternoon Meetings
In addition to the evening dinner session, two meetings were held in the afternoon. At 2 o'clock there was a special session of the Wisconsin Association of Postmasters and at 2:30 the executive committee of the state postmasters' league held a short session. Following the afternoon sessions the entire delegation of visitors was taken on a tour of inspection of the new Appleton post-office building under direction of William A. Cooke, who is supervising construction of the building for the U. S. government.

John S. Farrell, president of the valley postal chiefs' organization, opened the meeting Saturday evening presiding Clarence Loesch, Menasha, postmaster, who acted as toastmaster.

Among the officials of the various state organizations who attended the meeting were Oliver R. Weinandy, Cochrane, president of the

SCHEDULE SECOND LANDSCAPE LECTURE

Professor Aust to Tell Group About Making the Design Plan

The second weekly lecture on landscape gardening will be given by Professor Franz A. Aust at Appleton vocational school at 7:30 Tuesday evening. The six lecture course is being offered here by the Appleton Post-Crescent in cooperation with the University of Wisconsin Extension division and vocational school.

The second lecture will be on "Making the Design Plan." With complete review of last year's course and explanation of this year's subject matter covered in the opening lecture last week, Professor Aust will launch into a practical discussion of planning and gardening problems which should interest every small home owner.

People who have not yet enrolled may go to the vocational school a little before 7:30 Tuesday night to register. Upon registration they will be assigned to the student body at the chapel Monday morning. Dr. Denyes related some of his experiences as a missionary in Sumatra at a time when 14 kings of interior tribes petitioned him to travel into the interior with them in order to establish schools, churches, and to lead them to a new mode of living.

The home life of these cannibal tribes, their religious beliefs, their manner of customs and thoughts were outlined by Dr. Denyes, who commented on the strange fact that they did want a change in their social system and are intelligent enough to recognize their faults.

DENYES ADDRESSES LAWRENCE STUDENTS

"Some Kings I Have Known" was the subject discussed by Dr. J. R. Denyes of the Lawrence college faculty in an address to the students today at the chapel Monday morning. ## MODERN BOYS DEFENDED BY SCOUT LEADER

Weaknesses Should Be Corrected, Rev. Link Declares at Ceremony

An impressive ceremony, sponsored in Appleton by the valley council of boy scouts Sunday afternoon, brought home the principal objectives of scouting and right living to 500 boys, at the annual court of honor ceremony at Lawrence Memorial chapel.

The program consisted of a band concert; a tableau, "The Melting Pot of Boyhood," the address of welcome by Chris Mullen, council president; award of attendance streamers and gold honor rating stars, selections by the scout quartet; an address by the Rev. George M. Link of Springfield, Ill., and another tableau, "The Trails of Scouting" in which a large number of council scouts received awards and were promoted in rank.

Illustrating his talk with a "sheep shank knot" fashioned from a piece of rope, the Rev. Link told the audience of approximately 1,000 that the character of a boy must be developed physically, mentally and socially, and religiously.

In defense of modern boyhood, he stated that boy scouts are too often misjudged, being called sissies at one time and rough necks at another. Boys are boys and their little weaknesses should be overlooked after they have been corrected, the speaker stated.

Leader Training
He explained the responsibilities of scout leaders, pointing out that the character of a boy is often fashioned after that of his scoutmaster or assistant scoutmaster. He told scout leaders that because of their responsibilities it is necessary for them to train themselves if they are to lead wisely.

The significance of the valley council scout movement was traced in the address of welcome by Mr. Mullen. The speaker lauded the work of scout leaders and of M. G. Clark, council executive. He told the audience that Mr. Clark is ranked as one of the outstanding executives in the National council.

The tableau opened with Uncle Sam in the person of Joseph Kerrigan, summoning all boys to the melting pot if they wished to become scouts. A horde of boys rushed down the aisles of the chapel, onto the stage, and jumped into a large black melting pot constructed of beaver-board. Later the group marched from the side entrance of the platform in full dress uniform—full dressed scouts.

The highest award given to a scout leader was presented to H. H. Brown, scoutmaster of Troop 2 in the form of gold key. The award was made by Herb Hellig, chairman of the training committee.

Honor Brown
Mr. Brown has completed five years of active work as scout leader, and also has finished the five year training course prescribed by the national council.

Another impressive part of the program was the presentation of Eagle awards to six Eagle scouts and the honoring of scout mothers. The badges were pinned on the boys by their mothers, after which the fathers of these youngsters, assembled on the stage, received their Eagle badge pins.

Eagle scouts receiving their badges are: Harry Lewis, Troop 4; Frank Hammer, Troop 4; Robert Peerenboom, Troop 6; Karl Peerenboom, Troop 6; Robert Meyer, Troop 10; and Franklin Haven, Troop 21. Other Eagle scouts who received their badges during the past year and who were honored during the ceremony are: William Ogilvie, Troop 2; Alfred Craig, George McClellan, Lowell Ziegl, and Michael Monahan, Troop 3; Bruce and Hampton Purdy, Troop 4; Karlund Walters, Troop 4; Wallace Mooney, Troop 20, and Edgar Arps, Troop 20.

Attendance streamers were awarded by E. A. Kilboren, scout commissioner to the following troops: Troop 1, St. Joseph church; Troop 2, First Methodist Episcopal church; Troop 3, St. Thomas Episcopal church; Troop 4, Menasha; Troop 5, Grace Episcopal church; Troop 6, Grace Episcopal church; Troop 7, American legion; Troop 8, St. Mary church; Troop 9, American legion; Troop 10, First Methodist Episcopal church; Troop 11, McKinley Junior high school; Troop 12, Roosevelt Junior high school; Troop 13, First Methodist Episcopal church; Troop 14, St. Paul's church; Troop 15, All Saints Episcopal church; Troop 16, All Saints Episcopal church; Troop 17, Black Creek; Troop 19, American legion; Troop 20, Rotary club, Kaukauna; Troop 21, Methodist church, Clintonville; Troop 22, Clintonville; and Troop 23, American legion, Clintonville.

Award Stars
The award of honor rating stars was made by Frank Younger to Troop 1, St. Joseph church; Troop 4, American legion; Troop 9, Menasha; Troop 10, American legion; Troop 11, McKinley Junior high school. This award is made on the basis of attendance, scout advancement, outdoor activities, growth in membership, and monthly troop committee activities.

J. Martin Van Rooy officiated during the "Trails of Scouting" tableau. He was assisted by Star, Life and Eagle scouts. This part of the program was designed to bring out the true significance of the emblems of scouting from Tenderfoot to Eagle, which lead to the Castle of greatest achievement.

During the ceremony recognition was given to the following Star scouts: Troop 1, Leon De Groot, Joseph Rammer, Charles Riden, Troop 2, Howard Eandy, Karl East, Samuel Leete, and Clark Nixon; Troop 3, Dwight Chandler, John Donovan, Carleton Grode, Karl Ruch, and John Schermer, Troop 4, Edward Evolein, Jack Pevel, Anthony Koitsch, Harry Rhodes, and Robert Wilson; Troop 5, Wil-

He Claims He is Jesse James!

Immense Fortunes Still In Ground In Virgin Gold

San Francisco —(P)— Under the feet of a few thousand Californians there lies, supposedly within comparatively easy reach, virgin gold estimated by the state bureau of mines to be worth $600,000,000.

Taking cognizance of the increasing clamor for the precious metal, the bureau today summarized in that figure its idea of the amount of gold still within the grasp of casual prospectors and placer miners. Their ranks have been swelled by the unemployed.

To the $600,000,000 total the bureau added $900,000,000 as possibly approximating the value of recoverable gold in California remaining within the reach of quartz or "hard rock" miners, who must have capital to follow the precious veins 7,000 feet or more into the earth in order to produce profitably.

On top of these reports are figures from various government agencies showing the gold fields of the United States are capable of yielding an estimated maximum of $2,333,393,500 in the 22-year period ending in 1950.

The heavy touch of a modern Midas is all that is necessary, in the opinion of state mining authorities, to bring these yellow riches out of the earth and create another golden age.

Walter W. Bradley, state mineralogist, said the matter of recovering California's gold was mainly one of man power, prospecting ability and hard work.

In its estimates the state bureau has concluded that there remains almost as much recoverable gold in California as has been taken out since the great discovery of 1848. From that year to the end of 1931 the state produced $1,852,203,964 in gold.

It is the theory of mining men that in digging in the areas whose potential wealth is estimated on outward appearances, rich veins of which there now are no traces may be uncovered. Government surveys deal particularly with these potentialities in the Alaska fields and in the Black Hills area of South Dakota.

Bradley believes California's $600,000,000 in "surface" gold can be recovered by going over the ground and by following veins and pockets of the known California fields down to a depth of not more than 500 feet.

He estimated 10,000 or more itinerant men and women moved through the gold area of northern California last year and took out approximately $1,000,000, averaging a little more than $1 a day.

BISHOP CANNON IS LAUDED BY DRY LEADERS

Called "Great Champion of Freedom of Conscience and Intellect"

Washington —(P)— Firmly aligned behind a policy of "no retreat" on prohibition and its enforcement, the Anti-Saloon league devoted itself today to hearing a long list of speakers, among them Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

"Church and Government" was the topic chosen by this outstanding campaigner of the dry cause, who only yesterday was endorsed by the league in a formal resolution as "a great champion of freedom of conscience and intellect."

The address of the clergyman was set for the end of the afternoon program, after Dr. James M. Dorn, commissioner of industrial alcohol; Louis J. Taber, master of the National Grange; Gov. John G. Winant of New Hampshire, and many others have been heard.

Gov. William H. Murray of Oklahoma, will address the convention tonight on "The Law's Relation to Temperance and Morals."

The league's declaration of policy, in which also will be given its attitude on prohibition legislation pending in congress, will be made public tomorrow night at the close of the biennial convention. The general program for this year, as advocated by the officials and approved applaudingly by the members, calls for support of labels in state and national elections; opposition to legalization of alcoholic beer, to proposals for state liquor control and to a referendum.

Praise For Bishop
The tribute to Bishop Cannon adopted last night, was written by O. S. Poland of Boston, secretary pro tempore of the league. It described the Southern Methodist clergyman as "a protector of the independence of the franchise," and added that only Cannon's resolution and sacrifice "stands between thousands of independent voters and social ostracism, financial ruin, and serious physical harm."

Poland explained this section of the resolution referred to Bishop Cannon's refusal to make known the names of his associates and supporters in the 1928 election. It was not, he said, to protect himself that Cannon was refusing information.

The assertion that "if the United States goes into the liquor business, Uncle Sam will necessarily become the bartender for 120,000,000 people" was made before the league by Senator Robinson, Republican Indiana. He said this would put the American flag "over every grog shop in the land" and make each bartender a "public official" under state control.

With Representative C. E. Moore, Republican, Ohio, Robinson expressed opposition to repeal and modification of the prohibition law. Moore said he thought anti-prohibition proposals now before congressional committees, if adopted eventually "would cause the saloon to return."

BISHOP G. G. BENNETT, DULUTH, MISSING ON WAY TO RHODE ISLAND

Providence, R. I. —(P)— The whereabouts of the Rt. Rev. Granville Gaylord Bennett, Episcopal bishop of Duluth, Minn., were a subject of concern at the office of the Episcopal diocese of Rhode Island today. The mid-western prelate failed to arrive to fill weekend engagements and his office in Duluth reported he had not been in touch there since last Wednesday when he presumably started east.

Bishop Bennett was to have reached here last Thursday to take over for the next two months the duties of the Most Rev. James DeWolf Perry, bishop of Rhode Island and presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church of America, while the latter attended to the affairs of the church in New York City.

Bishop Bennett, regarded as one of the most brilliant speakers of the denomination, had several speaking engagements and a confirmation over the weekend.

JURY DISAGREES IN ARSON TRIAL

Judge Dismisses Group at Midnight After 11 Hours of Deliberation

After 11 hours of deliberation the jury considering the case of Mrs. Mary Scharmann, Appleton, charged with arson, was dismissed at midnight Saturday after they failed to reach an agreement. The state immediately moved for another trial and Judge Theodore Berg set Feb. 11 as the date. Testimony in the case ended Friday and Saturday morning was given over to hearing pleas of the attorneys. The case went to the jury at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Scharmann was charged by the state with setting two fires in her home on Nov. 28, 1931, and then leaving for the evening. Because the fires had no draught they did not break out immediately, it was alleged. Damage was caused to the extent of about $700. Mrs. Scharmann's personal property was insured for $1,000, and the state alleges she set the fires to collect the insurance.

Attorneys for the defense claimed that one of the fires started from coals from a stove and the other from heat and smoke which brought about combustion. The defense also attacked the alleged confession Mrs. Scharmann made to W. E. Finnegan, deputy state fire marshal, and the method in which the confession was obtained.

Possibility of a directed child play program in Appleton this summer, either on the scale of past years or on a restricted scale, will be discussed tonight at the meeting of the Civic Council at the Y. M. C. A. The council has had a committee investigating the project for the last month. The common council annually has appropriated $3,000 for the work, but this year withdrew support.

COMMITTEE MEETS

The street lighting committee will meet at city hall at 7:30 Monday evening. The group will consider a petition for a street light on the corner of W. Spring st and N. Summit-st.

MEN HELD HERE TO FACE FEDERAL COURT

Jack Meyer, J. C. Christen Go to Milwaukee With U. S. Marshal

Jack Meyer and J. C. Christen of California and Montana, the latter a former resident of Hortonville, pleaded guilty of transporting a stolen car from one state to another when they appeared before United States commissioner, J. F. Watermolen, Green Bay, Saturday. They were bound over to the January term of federal court in Milwaukee and Monday morning were taken to Milwaukee by deputy federal marshal Roy Lemkuhl. Bond was set at $1,000 each and was not furnished.

The two men were arrested early Sunday morning, Jan. 10, by sheriff's officers after investigation of their hut at Stephenville revealed a quantity of groceries and merchandise that the men confessed was stolen from a general store at Royaltown, the sheriff reported. The men said they had come to this section of the Green Bay state to investigate the investigation. The men were captured when a deputy's car was placed across the road leading to the shack, and the men got out to investigate. Sheriff's officers rushed them with saved off shot guns as they tried to reach for a .38 calibre revolver.

Investigation revealed the men were driving a car stolen at Minneapolis. The federal charge resulted.

SETTLEMENT NEAR IN WAGE CONTROVERSY

A settlement of the wage controversy between wire weavers and employers appears near today, it was reported this noon by representatives of the employees. Faced with a decrease in wages of approximately 15 per cent at the first of the year, the wire weavers temporarily quit work while they took up the wage proposal with officials of their national organization. The wire weavers had indicated that they would be willing to accept a 10 per cent reduction. Approximately 60 men employed as wire weavers in Appleton have been idle this month. It is now believed, however, that a settlement will be reached within a few days.

China. But the degree of downright hunger in these villages of Thuringia, a short motor drive from the Weimar home of Goethe, is even more impressive to a citizen of the Western world than the mass misery of the remote incredible East.

We drove through the Forest of Thuringia on a winter afternoon. The smokestacks of abandoned glass works threw occasional shadows across the snow-covered roads and the gaping windows of deserted factories eyed us coldly. All the seventy-five miles from Jena we had passed not half a dozen automobiles, although the towns and villages crowded one upon the other. We were not the only travelers, but the others were on foot.

In Altenfeld a glass kiln glowed in the interior, whirling globes of white and yellow swung toward us. Fire caverns shone behind the legs of dim-bled men. Above their heads twirled magic shapes of incandescence. Some shapes descended fell into molds. The men blew and puffed their cheeks and heaved their chests. The wood steamed and sent white jets to cloud the heat of black-faced boys waiting for the product of the incandescence. The molds opened. The yellow glass cooled, turned cherry red, and the black-faced boys scooped on their shovels another dozen cognac bottles.

Another twelve men had earned 3 of a cent apiece.

Big Kiln Closing Down

They spent no time contemplating their achievement. They thrust their tubes into the furnace mouths and once more swung their globes of molten glass. The shadows danced, the steam rose high, the black-faced boys ran back and forth. It was the last day. Tomorrow the big kiln would close and 220 men out of 280 employed in the works would be discharged.

On this, their last day of employment, the men required no speed-up orders. About their haste was a desperate earnestness. Every bottle meant a quarter of a penny, and if they had blown hard enough and twirled fast enough and if each one in the course of six days had turned out two thousand eight hundred bottles, each one could take home at the end of the week seven whole dollars to mitigate the week's "miserable."

To earn that much a glass blower has to produce in eight hours 468 bottles, sixty an hour, one a minute. Every sixty seconds he must plunge his tube into the oven, catch a mass of molten glass on its end, withdraw it, twist it, swing it, blow it into a globe, place it in a form, twist and blow until it assumes the shape of a bottle. Snow lay deep on the factory yard, the doors were open, but the faces of the glass blowers steamed with sweat.

I asked what they did with their spare time. The Mayor of Masserberg, a former glass blower, replied: "Many of those who work in Altenfeld live in villages six miles away. The men walk six miles to work that begins at 6. They work until 4 in the afternoon, turning out a bottle a minute, then walk the six miles home again. They get to bed about 8 o'clock in the evening. Few of them get as much as eight hours sleep. On Sunday they sleep all day."

Hit By British Tariff

This now was over for these men. But the feverish speed with which they worked was sufficient evidence that they preferred this even to going to the dole.

The owner of the plant had a face not less deeply lined with worry than those of the men. He talked. "The British put on their protective tariff of 50 per cent for glass ware on December 1, 1931. Our trade was mostly export. When the British tariff went on our sales stopped almost completely. We own kilns all over this region. A fortnight ago we closed one in Heubach with 220 men. Some time before we closed the one in Masserberg with 250 men, and the one in Koenigssee with 150 men.

This week we close the one in Neustadt with 100 men, today this one in Altenfeld with 220 men, and tomorrow the force in Gross Breitenbach will be cut from 300 to 150 men. The fall of the pound sterling had weakened our trade considerably. The tariff was the last blow. Our only plant running at nearly full capacity is in Gross Kayna where we have eight American fully automatic machines doing with 300 men the work that 1,000 would do by hand.

In Altenfeld sixty families were employed until recently making by hand pharmaceutical "ampullen," the tiny flasks to contain hypodermic fluids. One family managed to purchase a machine that makes 30,000 ampullen in twelve hours where it took three hand workers eight hours to make 3,000. The fifty-nine families went on the dole.

Tariffs and the Machine

Here in the most highly industrialized form were perfect examples of two factors that have helped produce in Germany the phenomena of the economic crisis. "Protective tariffs abroad and the substitution of machine for hand labor at home. The factory owner grew passionate. "Sure," he admitted, "the men work harder than horses. But I work harder than the men. I get up at 5 o'clock in the morning, work until 9 o'clock at night. My father works even more. He was up last night until 3 o'clock in the Gross Breitenbach plant. We have nothing from life. Fifty per cent of our men are Communist. We ourselves have no time to think politically. Most of the factory owners are National Socialists. They think Hitler can change things. Anyway things could not be worse.

"The British," he went on bitterly "put on a protective tariff. We have to close our plants. Next year we can pay no taxes to the State. If the State gets no taxes it can pay no reparations. If France receives no reparations it can pay Great Britain. If Great Britain receives no paymenu was the same. From house to house throughout the village the story was repeated, monotonous, without light or shade, and the most remarkable feature of the people's attitude was the completely matter of fact way in which they answered question. "Yes, we are hungry," they replied, in much the same manner one would say, "Yes, today is Monday." Only one did an old glass worker swallow hard as he related that on Sundays his family of five usually managed to get one-half pound of meat, and that it tasted extraordinarily good. None of them made the least gesture toward asking for alms, and it was always necessary carefully to explain the purpose of the visit before they would talk about their condition. "They are proud," explained the Mayor, "and none of them like to admit how poor he is."

The condition prevailing in Fehrenbach, I was told by a dozen persons, exist in virtually the same degree in the towns of Masserberg, Schnett, Heubach and Wildenspring, comprising 6,000 inhabitants. The vicinity has never been exceptionally prosperous, but never in its history has it suffered such a crisis as this winter. In 1924, for example, the one large glass firm I visited in Altenfeld had in all its branches 4,000 workers busy. Today it has 1,500. From 1924 to 1928 the village of Fehrenbach, that today has nearly 300 unemployed, had a maximum of sixty out of work. Even up until last year Fehrenbach still had seventy men employed, today only twenty. Whether it is true or not that this is the worst winter in 100 years for all Germany it is certainly true of this district that it is the worst winter in the memory of the oldest living inhabitant.

Next door to Fehrenbach in the village of Masserberg the Mayor visited me in the hotel to protest against the idea that Fehrenbach was the worst off village of the group. At midnight the Masserberg Mayor went to his office to fetch his books and show that in this town of 1,100 inhabitants and a total of 239 households the heads of 210 households were employed and 102 of them were on the local charity dole paying 7 marks a week in this first month of 1932, he emphasized, the entire lot of 210 households would have exhausted their right to the state doles and would be on the starvation dole of 7 marks.

Three Classes of Doles

In considering the general economic condition of Germany and especially the condition of its unemployed it must be remembered that there are three categories of doles. The first category is unemployment insurance. To receive it the worker must have worked uninterruptedly and paid his unemployment insurance premiums for one year. The worker is entitled to this insurance whether he can show necessity or not. The payments vary according to the wages the man received and the size of his family. The Labor Office, Neukoelln Berlin, reports that the average payment since the last Government decrees is 55 65 marks a month. This sum, the jobless worker may receive for sixteen to twenty weeks, according to the length of his former employment.

After the jobless worker has exhausted this period he goes into the so-called "Krisenfurtsorge." This is a straight dole. To receive it the worker must show necessity. It also varies, but averages, throughout the Reich, according to the Labor Office, 45 14 marks a month. In this category the worker may remain from 38 to 52 weeks.

After this period the jobless man is relegated to the so-called "Wohlfahrt or local charity dole, made up from contributions by the Reich, by the states and communes and by the municipality where the worker resides. In it the worker may remain as long as the money holds out. According to the Labor Office, the average of this dole throughout the Reich is 29 68 marks a month.

This sum means genuine hunger for the recipients and one of the most important features to keep in mind about the German system of the unemployed relief is that the longer the crisis continues the more of the unemployed go on the local charity dole. The size of the local charity dole depends on how much revenue the communes have, and the longer the crisis lasts the less money they have and the smaller becomes the dole. The communes of the Thuringian Forest, according to rule, should have contributed one-third of the local charity dole. They have absolutely no money in their treasury and could contribute nothing.

Cheap Labor Only Advantage

It may be that here as in Falkenstein the phenomena of the Thuringian Forest villages are local, extreme, not typical. It is true that the glass industry here would suffer in any case from high freight rates and that it never enjoyed any particular economic advantages except cheap labor. But that the present degree of poverty is unparalleled is asserted by every witness, and that there could exist in the midst of the most highly industrialized country in Europe a series of communities of whose 6,000 population at least 5,500 are not only jobless but perceptibly near the starvation point is an index figure of some value for judgment of the state of the whole country.

The view of most foreign observers has hitherto been that Germany has been living beyond its means. Complaints from Germany were usually ascribed to the unwillingness of the Germans to suffer a diminution of their once admittedly high standard of living. It remains to be seen whether this judgment still holds true of the whole country, but it is certain that the standard of living in the Thuringian Forest could not be further depressed without reaching the actual starvation point. The Mayors of Fehrenbach and Masserberg insisted the condition of their communities was incomparably worse than during the inflation, worse even than during the war.

On our way through the forest we passed a memorial to the fallen in the war. Snow piled high on the back of a steel helmeted soldier and snow covered all but a few names on the bronze honor roll. Near by stood another memorial, but the snow on the roof of the abandoned glass factory covered no honor roll.

As a result he received 180 days in jail instead of the usual 30 day sentence, which

MONEY IN BUILDING
In spite of the sharp decrease in building costs and a general decline in building activities all over the United States last year, new construction in Appleton aggregated about $150,000 more in 1931 than in the previous year. The record is a revelation of the courage of Appleton people and their abiding faith in the future of this community.

While 1931 was an excellent year from the standpoint of low building costs, there is every indication that the early part of 1932 will be equally as favorable. It might be that later in the year, if the generally predicted business improvement materializes, that building prices, like those of other commodities, will move to higher levels, but present prices are sufficiently low to be a real inducement to build.

The year's building record indicates that Appleton is falling behind in home construction. A comprehensive survey has indicated the city can absorb from 150 to 200 new homes a year without depressing the values of homes now in existence, but in 1931 only 85 new homes were constructed.

The decrease is not due to any lack of desire to build, but rather to inability to secure the necessary financial help. Home financing organizations are besieged with requests for loans but sufficient money is not available.

It would seem that present low building costs would be an inducement to take some of the money now in hiding and place it in safe productive channels by making it available for home financing. A concerted effort by public spirited citizens to bring this about would be a real community service, benefiting not only the home builder but general business as well. There still is plenty of money in Appleton; what is necessary is to put it to work where it will do some good.

EXTENUATING CIRCUMSTANCES

Governor Judd of Hawaii has made the usual flourish of the incompetent executive after a catastrophe, attributable in some respect at least to the debility of a feeble and languid government.

He will recommend, he says, to a special session of the Hawaiian legislature that outrages upon women shall be punished by death or life imprisonment.

It wasn't the absence of a severe penalty that induced these crimes—but the failure to enforce existing ones.

Penalties may be piled sky-high on the statute books and be just so much shoddy litter. Often the higher they are piled the more sterile and worthless they are.

The fault, as usual, is not in our laws nor our stars, but in ourselves. One of those identified as participating in the vicious attack upon Mrs. Massie was convicted as late as 1929 for a similar attack, and, though sentenced to an indeterminate term in the penitentiary of not to exceed fifteen years, was released after a short sojourn there by this very same governor who is now crying out at the top of his lungs for the death penalty.

"Extenuating circumstances," explains the governor for that release. There always are extenuating circumstances, or they can be picked out of the passing breezes by an executive bent on pleasing some interceding friend of the accused.

The greatest deterrent to crime will always remain the same. It lies in the certainty of punishment of the guilty, not in the savagery of that punishment.

WILSON AND BAKER
Woodrow Wilson who left the presidency nearly 11 years ago, an invalid from his tremendous labors, may yet come back into his own.
And Newton D. Baker, his trusted Secretary of War, is beginning to loom largely in the minds of men, and because of his splendid abilities, as a possible presidential nominee of the Democratic party for what appears to be the Democratic year of 1932.
We are often given to think when a great and good leader like Abraham Lincoln is taken by death in the midst of his labors, that, had he lived, somehow, he would have averted the appalling wrongs of that tragic era following the Civil war, because above the din and hatred engendered by prolonged strife he would not have waved the "bloody shirt" but would have kept his head.

Yet Woodrow Wilson's experience and his inability to convince the American people of the necessity of a League of Nations and its probable potency in preventing armed strife force the conclusion that the people of the country would even resist leadership that entailed too many sacrifices, however bright its promises may be.

Mr. Baker in his recent address at Winchester supported his old chief stating, "What the world needs is that which Woodrow Wilson had in supreme degree, faith in the common people," whereas in truth that faith seemed to have been misplaced for it was these common people who supported their representatives in repudiating Mr. Wilson's policies.

Continuing Mr. Baker declared that President Wilson was not interested in Europe but in giving to the world a substitute for war and that the greatest loss of the World war was not in lives or credit or property "but the loss of faith."

President Wilson's great project of the League of Nations will come in time. But it will not come until the people realize the full truth and accuracy of the statement that "no one ever won a war for every participant in it is a loser."

WHEN DREAMS COME TRUE

Safe in New Orleans, Randi Lerohl, the Superior, Wisconsin, scrubwoman who started down the Mississippi in a flat-bottomed rowboat for the Gulf of Mexico, states that she will not consider her journey finished until she actually sees the mouth of the mighty stream. "That's where I started for, and that's where I'm going," she says.

Impractical? Of course. Foolhardy? Probably. Yet, Randi's adventure has stirred a sympathetic response throughout the nation. Her steadfast pursuit of her own particular pot of gold at the rainbow's end arouses our admiration even while it evokes our smiles.

All of us, at some time or another, have enjoyed day-dreams of voyaging to those dazzling far places. Sometimes fortune has smiled, and the dreams have come true, but in the great majority of cases other interests and unforeseen obstacles have intervened, and the day-dreams, evanescent, have left us only the assurance that their romantic anticipation may stay to cheer us but their realization is afar in the cloudy future.

Thus, because Randi is the embodiment of a day-dream made to come true by sheer force of will, we all rejoice in her plucky, and share vicariously in her realization.

But she has won further laurels. Within a score of miles of her destination, she has endorsed no one's cigarettes, signed no vaudeville contracts, recommended no beauty lotions, given no lectures, and sold no picture postcards. And, in these highly publicized days, that's something.

Opinions Of Others

THE SWISS ARMY
The Swiss army finds itself in rather a peculiar situation. It has too many generals! For this reason it is quite a top-heavy, unwieldy organization, with a high command quite out of proportion to the total rank and file. In times of martial disturbances of which, fortunately for her, Switzerland has known few, the chief leader of the army has been called simply "the general." Other officers of the supreme military council, equal in rank to the presiding general in normal times of peace, are, when in the field, designated unobtrusively as colonels. To distinguish these ex-generals, or "colonels pro tempore," in their real duties, they are respectively referred to as "brigadier-colonels," "division-colonels," and the "army-corps-colonels."
The differentiation of these military gentlemen is then somewhat simplified, but in times of peace it is often difficult to determine what general is to take precedence over another at public functions and formal gatherings, where the elite of Swiss fashion and society must be encountered.
Switzerland now has 31 "generals," which in the opinion of nearly everybody in and out of the army, is about 20 generals too many. But where to start to reduce this expensive and superfluous contingent is a point upon which there is a lamentable lack of agreement.—Vienna Neues (Austria).

A part of the argument about the football situation at Madison revolves around which system is to be played at Wisconsin next fall, the Notre Dame (Rockne) system or the Warner system. The latter system has been more or less in vogue at Madison for the past few years and hasn't been so much of a success. The Rockne system has been quite successful in most places and is at least a pleasure to watch. (The famous "hip-hip-hip" shift.)

But whatever happens, if the season next year isn't a lot better than in 1931, the coach will be accused of using the Culbertson system.

WHAT CONSTITUTES WHOLE-SOME MILK?

In the last two annual meetings of the American Association of Medical Milk Commissioners the pasteurization of certified milk was strongly advocated but voted down.

When they begin pasteurizing certified milk, please cross my name off the list of certified milk customers. If we're going to depend on par-boiling to disinfect the milk, to kill off any disease germs there may be in it, then any Grade A or Grade B milk will do. I can't save the premium price for the certified kind if it's milk Commission that certifies it (doctors, bacteriologists, veterinarians, public health officers) has so little faith in the purity of the product as to acknowledge that par-boiling (pasteurization) is necessary to make it a safe food.

Pasteurization means simply heating in the milk up to 145 degrees F., keeping it at that temperature from 20 minutes to half an hour and then cooling the milk again. That degree and duration of heat is enough to kill any tubercle bacilli, typhoid bacilli, diptheria bacilli, streptococci, or other known disease-producing germs which may be in the milk. That is the sole purpose or excuse for pasteurizing milk—to kill disease germs which may be in the milk, no matter whether the disease germs are contributed by the cow or by persons handling the milk at any point between cow and consumer.

Pasteurized milk does not sour as quickly as raw fresh milk does. This is because the heating also kills off or weakens the growth of a considerable number of the lactic acid bacilli which are naturally present in milk and which produce natural souring of milk. As these lactic acid germs are rather beneficial to man, it is one drawback about pasteurization that it does diminish the number and potency of these beneficial germs.

Certified milk is the purest, cleanest, safest milk obtainable. It costs a little more than a premium price. Not only the dairy but the barns, the care of the animals, their feeding, the health of the animals, the habits and the health of every employee from milker to delivery man, is under the constant supervision of the milk commission which certifies the milk. This commission usually consists of representatives of the local medical society and the local health board, and always includes a regular bacteriologist to make regular examinations of the milk, and a veterinary surgeon to keep constant watch of the health of the cows. Visitors to certified milk dairies are not welcomed—they may bring disease—but if you've ever visited such a place you know how extraordinary cleanly everything, and every animal and every person was. But that isn't the half of it. Of course mere visible cleanliness is desirable, but it doesn't give any assurance of safety from disease.

If certified milk is not entirely safe without pasteurization, then I think a customer would be foolish to pay the premium price for it. I have always regarded certified milk as pure and clean from the beginning; whereas pasteurized milk is any old milk disinfected by heat.

Aluminum
I have an aluminum juice extractor. I notice it discolors orange juice or grapefruit juice slightly. Should I return it? Many might not notice the discoloration, but I have tried a glass reamer to compare, and the aluminum one certainly discolors the juice. (Mrs. M. S.)
Answer—It would have no ill effect on health. If the taste is not affected, why worry?

a person after the heart has stopped beating? Is a person pronounced dead when the heart stops beating? Can there be life after the heart has once stopped beating? Are babies ever born without heart action and then resuscitated by the physician? (Elida, Ethel and Claire).
Answer. 1. Yes. 2. Sometimes the person is, rather too soon. 3. Yes. 4. Yes. Your questions are as indefinite as my answers—you fail to specify how long the cessation or absence of heart beat must be to warrant the conclusion that it has stopped.

A Bystander In Washington

BY HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington — Members of the house are at their homes for the holidays knowing full well that perhaps the most joyful period of a congressman's year has come to an end.

That joyful period extended from opening day on Monday, December 7, until the beginning of the Christmas recess Tuesday night, December 22. Not all of this time, to be sure, as Speaker Garner put it, the house has real reason to be proud of the progress it has made thus far.

But a great part of these 15 days has been taken up with speechmaking—about almost everything.

The house being as it is, it requires a week or so to get down to business. Organization must be perfected, committee assignments ironed out, and many other things done before actual work can be started.

Consequently, the speaker usually turns the boys loose.

Plenty To Do
In other words, he gives them opportunity to get everything off their chests.

After such a long lay-off as the members have had between the last and this session of congress, many things pile up that must find expression in some manner. Back home they have heard rumblings of discontent from their constituents and a thousand other grievances.

Then, too, most of them like to talk to hear their own voices. And their favorite forum is the floor of congress. Perhaps there are views they expressed on the stump back home which won applause and they want to test them out on their colleagues.

"Mr. Speaker" knows well enough that unless he lets them have time early they will pester him for the rest of the session. So he gives them full sway.

The way it works is like this: Mr. Rainey, the democratic leader, sits at his big red table on the right of the chamber. Mr. Snell, the republican leader, sits at his big red table on the left.

Everybody's Happy
Mr. Rainey arises and says: "Mr. Speaker, I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Alabama." When the gentleman from Alabama, if he desires five minutes extra, then Mr. Rainey gladly gives it to him.

When the gentleman from Alabama has finally concluded, then Mr. Snell arises on his side and says: "Mr. Speaker, I now yield ten minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey." Similarly, if the gentleman has not concluded in ten minutes, Mr. Snell graciously lets him have more time.

This goes on for days. And everybody is happy.
But there'll be little of that when they come back after Christmas.

Seen And Heard In New York

BY WILLIAM GAINES.

New York — Everybody thought everything that could be peddled, had been peddled on Forty-second street sidewalks.

It's a familiar story now: how the once proud Theaplan Way was invaded by the carnival caravan; how burlesque took the theaters and hawkers took the curbs. Where once a path was cleared for Barrymores, now the path is cluttered with vendors' knickknacks.

During the pre-Christmas nights, especially, peddlers were almost as thick as pedestrians. And that's some thickness.

Toy sellers wound up their mechanical doodads and scooted them across the curbs. If a passer-by stepped on a roller-skating duck, the cry was raised for pay for the damaged duck. Persons too timid to call a cop simply paid sap money.

Everything from magic car cleaning rags to telescopic views of the moon was ballyhooed — almost everything, everybody thought, that could be peddled. Competition was so strenuous it was difficult for any one of the hawkers to assemble a crowd of gapers to assemble a crowd of gapers.

It remained for a gentleman in a plug hat, with a cigar stub in the corner of his mouth, to win the crowd with baby alligators for sale.

"Two dollars apiece, with full instructions for feeding and care," was his answer to cost inquiries. Girls squealed while their escorts begged them and carried them off—afterwards to vendors, perhaps, what on earth they would do with a pet alligator in that hall bedroom.

The reptiles were about half a foot long. They peeped from the salesman's pockets. They crawled about his shoulders. He had dozens more, writhing in a valise.

"Here you are, gents, just the thing to put in the stockings this Christmas. Take one home to the kiddies," he exhorted.

"John, if you take one of those things home I'll go to a hotel," a woman admonished her husband, who just would be boyish. The crowd laughed and sales plucked up.

Turning The Tables
The first of several pictures satirizing Broadway shows, business, Hollywood's answer to such razz plays as "Once in a Lifetime"—has reached New York.

Maybe it'll turn out to be a cross-country debate. There still is another stage comedy kidding the movies in the offing.

"Santa Claus didn't get so much soot in his whiskers coming down chimneys this Christmas," a press agent for a manufacturer of oil burners announces. Whoever saw any soot in his whiskers, anyway?

Just Around The Corner
An old man presided over a large display of holiday cards on sale in an ample Forty-fourth street show-room, long vacant before his temporary tenancy. I was his only customer about eight o'clock evening.

"Yes, yes, not many buying New Year cards this year," he fell to chatting at the cash register. I commented that he must have sold a great many Christmas cards, though, since not so many persons sent gifts that cost more.

"Well," he replied mournfully, "I've been setting up short around here every Christmas for a good many years. The ones who used to buy 25 and 50 cent cards, bought five and 10 cents cards this time."

POLITICIANS CAUSING CHAOS IN WINDY CITY

Believe Problems Could Easily Be Solved if Removed from Politics

BY OWEN L. SCOTT
Copyright, 1932, By Cons. Press
Chicago — (CPA) — Chaos in Chicago's government, with teachers long unpaid, bonds and several governmental units in default and martial law on the horizon, actually is found to grow from a tug-of-war between politicians, wedded to their jobs, and the city's creditors, determined on reform of an antiquated tax system.

Politics eliminated and the nation's second metropolis overnight could largely solve its financial problems. Tied in with political wrangling, no they go from bad to worse with no end seemingly in sight now short of complete collapse and a federal or state receivership.

Even so, Chicago citizens today show almost no real concern over the situation. Thus far, schools are operating as usual, police protection is better than it has been for years, the fire department is operating, parks are maintained, streets repaired better than under the previous mayor, and all regular municipal services run smoothly. All of this to the accompaniment of a knowledge that taxes needn't be paid, at least until the state supreme court passes on their legality. So the popular philosophy has become: "Why worry? A few thousand municipal employees aren't getting paid."

Eliminate Politics
To bring order out of the existing chaos in municipal financing, the simple need is for a tax machine with full power to collect taxes, and the need for playing politics. The existing 8-year-old taxing laws, designed for a rural community, have broken down under what is generally recognized here as high powered political manipulation.

As a matter of cold fact, Chicago fundamentally is in a stronger financial situation than most of the nation's big cities. Her bonded debt is only $84 per capita compared with $151 for New York City and $207 for Philadelphia. The local tax rate, even now, is among the lowest of those in the large cities—fifty-fifth in a list of 69 communities of 100,000 population and over.

But Chicago has been trying to live two years in advance of tax time. At present, not even 1930 taxes have been levied, while the year 1931 has passed. Owing to a taxpayer's strike, upheld recently by a court decision judging 1928 and 1929 tax assessments fraudulent, more than $140,000,000 worth of revenue for those years is uncollected, while the regular $255,000,000 levy has not been made for either 1930 or 1931.

New York, Philadelphia and Louisville, among larger cities, and scores of smaller governmental corporations are in financial straits even with taxes levied and collected. Chicago has been getting along without any real revenue.

Cut Expenses
Yet the city, by cutting expenses 15 per cent, is living within estimated normal revenues, available if taxes could be collected.

Banks, before loaning more money for city uses in advance of revenue collections, have demanded simple reforms in assessing laws, to centralize authority and eliminate fraud. Downstate legislators, seeking an income tax law for Illinois, which Chicago opposes, have joined with the local forces of William Hale Thompson, former mayor, and a small group of Democratic representatives to torpedo the plan for assessing reform.

The crisis they have created, however, is not loudly regretted by many responsible leaders, who think that the approaching governmental break down will force a general reform of the local governments, now divided into hundreds of tax levying units. Governor Louis L. Emmerson today called on the legislature to submit to the people a proposed call for a constitutional convention to rebuild the state's basic law.

FLASHES OF LIFE

By The Associated Press
Montreal — The Eskimos' heaven and hell are both down under. Heaven, said Bishop A. Turqueti, is at the bottom of the sea, in a domain of the great goddess of Nulayok; hell, is a bleak place of ice and snow full of vague terrors.

Chicago — William Forbes, 74, protected motorists from speeding trains at a railroad crossing for 20 years. He was killed yesterday as he crossed the same tracks in his automobile on his way home.

Ossining — It was a tough break for Lewis E. Lawes, Sing Sing warden, when he fractured his right wrist last night. But it was tougher still for his employees. He will be unable to sign the prison pay checks.

Women's Meet Enlivens Society In Washington

BY DOROTHEA J. LEWIS
(Post-Crescent's Washington Society Editor)
Washington—Among the important and interesting events of the busy and crammed full seven days that made up last week were the reception Tuesday night and the board meeting beginning Wednesday of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Among the Wisconsin people in attendance were Mrs. Ben Hooper of Oshkosh, chairman of the international relations committee of the national organization; Mrs. Edward Hammett of Sheboygan, national treasurer; Mrs. L. A. Leadbetter of Rhinelander, president of the Wisconsin branch, and Mrs. Charles S. Morris of Berlin.

Dr. and Mrs. Delos O. Kinsman, formerly of Appleton, were among the Wisconsin people in Washington attending the Tuesday night reception, which included in its guests many senators and congressmen.

Mrs. Hoover entertained members at a White House tea Wednesday.

The event of the Congressional club season took place last Wednesday evening when the club entertained in honor of the president and the first lady.

Members of Wisconsin's congressional delegation planned to attend and Mrs. John C. Schafer, wife of Rep. Schafer of Milwaukee, was in the receiving line with other officers of the club.

On Tuesday Mrs. Robert M. La Follette, Jr., attended her first senate ladies' luncheon of this congress. These unique luncheons bring together an interesting, attractive and unusual group of women. Because of national distress, the ladies have been meeting several hours before their luncheon time and serving for the Red Cross.

Senator La Follette was one of the few senators attending the recent birthday party given for Sen. Reed Smoot of Utah by his son. The party is an annual occurrence and is always held in the Capitol building. Sen. La Follette has been a guest at all of the luncheons. This most recent one celebrated the 70th birthday of the Utah Senator.

The new Metropolitan Memorial Church on the building committee of which Dr. D. O. Kinsman served, will be dedicated on Feb. 7. Bishop William McDowell will conduct services.

The Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Robert Patterson Lamont, who have a summer home in Wisconsin, were among the interesting guests attending the dinner Wednesday given by the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Erik Hendrik Louw in honor of the Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry L. Stimson.

Miss Ruby A. Black, wife of Herbert Little, former Wisconsin newspaperman, and her new daughter, Cornelia Jane Herbert Little, are now at home in Alexandria, Va. Young Miss Cornelia Jane, was born on Jan. 2.

Miss Black taught for two years in the Journalism Department of the University of Wisconsin and worked for the Wisconsin State Journal.

President and Mrs. Glenn Frank of the University of Wisconsin in Washington for a brief visit Wednesday and Thursday after "doing the shows" in New York for a longer period.

In their short time here they attended two parties. They lunched at the German Embassy as guests of the German Ambassador and Mrs. William Prittwitz and Gaffron. Mrs. William Hard, a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, was one of a distinguished group of guests.

In the evening, they were guests at a brilliant dinner party given by the former Ambassador to Great Britain and Mrs. Alanson Houghton. Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon was one of the guests. The Franks left for Madison Thursday.

Steps have been taken for some one else to issue the payroll.

New York — Actors and actresses have been depicted in a new role—saviors of the nation from worry and despair. Gov. O. Max Gardner of North Carolina, said they are doing more "to save the nation than the solemn pronouncements of politicians and financial leaders."

Alicante, Spain — President Zamora may be a good executive but his pitching aim is poor. Hurling a gift to a skillful torador he struck a workman in the arena and felt obliged to give the fellow 250 pesetas to soothe his feelings.

Rabat, Morocco—Belgeem N'Gadi, bandit chieftain, lost not only a wife of property and war materials when he fled Tatialest oasis in the face of French attack, but he was forced to leave all his wives behind him.

SUPREME COURT TO DETERMINE EFFECT OF TON-MILE LAW

Farmers Must Await Decision to Learn if They Are Entirely Exempt

MADISON—(AP)—Wisconsin farmers will have to await the decision of the state supreme court in the test case of the ton mile law to find out whether they are entirely exempt from paying a mileage tax on the operation of their trucks.

The supreme court will hear the case in February upon the petition of the Wisconsin Allied Truck Owners' association and upon its ruling depends, not only the extent to which farm trucks may be taxed, but the constitutionality of the law as a whole.

The law specifically provides that a farmer does not have to pay the ton mile tax when he hauls products from his farm to the primary market.

And, if his truck is under three tons in weight he is exempt entirely for the public service commission has held the law applicable only to vehicles weighing three tons or more.

This question arose: does the farmer who comes within the law, after hauling his products to market, have to pay the ton mile tax if he hauls other materials, such as feed, grain and machinery, back to his farm?

The commission ruled that he does. So the question for the supreme court, the senate and assembly have adopted a joint resolution by Senator V. S. Keppel, Holmen, declaring that it was the intent of the legislature not to impose the tax on farmers in any way so long as they do not use their trucks for commercial hauling.

The supreme court will have this expression of intent before it when it comes to rule upon the case.

The public service commission's ruling, it was explained, was solely in the interests of the state's treasury.

The Allied Truck operators have objected to the law on the ground that the exemption of trucks under three tons is discriminatory and that the ton mile tax rates ranging from one to two mills.

Present Arguments
Counsel representing the truck operators and the public service commission will present arguments on these questions next month.

The state is involved and has provoked considerable inquiry from all parts of the state. The governor's office receives letters daily asking information about it.

The public commission has been paying especial attention to farmers and truck men asking explanation of its provisions, which are of technical legal character.

It was reported in the legislature several weeks ago that Governor LaFollette had been considering an amendment to his call for the special session to permit clarification to the act, but this has not materialized.

The public service commission has worked out the administrative features in detail and the law is in full force.

The following statement from a member of the commission's force seeks to clarify some of the more recurrent questions:

"All vehicles bearing licenses classed 'D' or above are subject to the law unless specifically exempt and are required to carry special permit plates. Only those are exempt which are engaged in carrying farm products from the point of origin directly to the primary market and those operating entirely within the corporate limits of a city."

"But a vehicle, normally exempt becomes taxable when the basis of its exemption is violated, and remains so taxable until its owner takes steps through the commission locally to declare the truck exempt."

"A farmer may have a truck entirely exempt under the law merely to carry products to market. But once the truck is used for a purpose not within the exemption, the truck is then taxable. He can not have a truck that is exempt in the morning carrying milk to market and taxable in the afternoon coming back to the farm with a load of roots purchased in the city. A truck is either exempt, or taxable."

May Be Reinstated

"But if a farmer's truck becomes taxable through violation of the exemption, he may take steps through the commission to have his ton mile tax license revoked, again making his truck exempt."

Monthly, operators of trucks coming within the provisions of the law are required to make a report to the commission on blanks furnished by the commission of the taxable ton miles operated. The commission plans to compute the tax.

Ton miles are determined by a mathematical formula as follows: add the licensed capacity of the vehicle, trailer, or semi trailer to its actual weight. Multiply this sum by the number of miles operated when subject to the law, then divide the result by 2,000 to obtain ton miles. The licensed capacity is the weight which a vehicle has been licensed to carry. The weight of the load carried does not enter into the computation.

For example, if a truck actually weighs 5,000 pounds and is licensed to carry 7,500 pounds and you wish to determine ton miles for a trip of 20 miles, add the two truck weights, multiply by 20 and divide by 2,000.

The law then sets up tax rates per ton mile of operation ranging from one mill for trucks with an aggregate weight of seven tons to two mills for those of an aggregate of 14 tons.

In addition to the monthly report to the commission, a quarterly report is required. Blanks for the quarterly report are also furnished by the commission.

Teach Child How To Act In Company

BY ANGELO PATRI

Among the many letters I receive is one that appears again and again from different parts of the country. "My child is as good as good when he is alone with me but as soon as anybody comes into the house he is awful. He shows off until I'm so ashamed I don't know where to look."

There is nothing to be ashamed about. The child is behaving according to his nature. The stage was set for a show off and he took the opportunity. He isn't to be blamed for this. He is to be trained.

Usually this is the characteristic of the only child but others display it as well. It indicates that the child is longing for an audience and praise. He wants to feel equal to those about him. He wants to be regarded as one of them, not as a child who is to be seen and not heard. We have to prepare the child against this situation by training him to be useful, adequate and important in the company.

When company is expected tell the child about it. Give him a part in the preparation. Let him dust, set dishes on the tray, arrange flowers, put cookies on the plate and lay napkins ready. Instruct him in his part. If possible let him receive the guest with you at the front door. Don't emphasize his share in the receiving. If he makes a mistake, correct it. Rehearse him in this so he knows exactly what he is to do.

Teach him how to serve some part of the refreshments. He won't feel shy and helpless if he has to carry in a little tray, pass a glass on a plate, hand cake around, and the like. If he feels he can do his part in entertaining the guests there will be no notion of showing off. All reason for it has vanished. He is as useful, he has as big a part in the affair as anybody. He is at peace with his world.

Lonely children are likely to show off before others. The only child is likely to lose control of himself when company comes unless he has been trained for the occasion. Suppressed children are the worst of all. If they have been held down, if they have never had a chance to talk out loud and express all the thoughts that have been crowding into their minds they are going to take the first opportunity to rid themselves of suppressed energy. That means a scene before the guests.

If a child misbehaves before guests discipline him as you would if they were alone. It is a mistake to teach a child that he should do things before guests that he would not dare to do when they were alone with him. There are children who will try to do such things but when they learn that they will speak right out and that they will receive exactly the same treatment before guests as they would if they were not there, they behave as they ought.

Children are not naughty because of behavior problems. They are those of children, not naughty. The adolescent children have left this phase behind to a great extent. If they talk a bit big we don't notice it. Time will teach them better. If the little ones are well trained before time we won't have much trouble with them when the company comes.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

Urges More Religion In Play Of Boys

"BRING back religion in play," declared the Rev. George M. Link, Springfield, Ill., a worker in the field of Boy Guidance and Boy Scouts, in an address at the annual banquet of St. Joseph Holy Name society at St. Joseph Hall last night. There were about 400 members of the society present with about 15 members of the clergy from neighboring parishes.

Rev. Link declared that scouting is a fine means of teaching boys to improve themselves. He outlined a program of work such as is used in model boy camps, showing how an indirect means is used to teach the youngsters to know and love God by knowing and loving the evidences of him found in nature.

He advocated nature study for every boy and girl, and said that leaders aren't giving all they should to the youngsters whose work they are directing unless they take them behind the scenes of nature and point out to them God's plan in setting things down as they are. Manifestations of God are to be found in every bit of nature, the speaker said.

"Rocks and minerals remind us of the eternity of God," he said. "Trees teach that he is ever-present and ever-new; animals tell of his mystery; the weather denotes his spirit; flowers tell of his beauty; birds teach his grace; astronomy reminds of his immensity; physics of his power; chemistry of his intelligence; botany of his wisdom; and zoology of his providence."

The Rev. George Schemmer, Marinette, and the Rev. Father Creten, spiritual director of the society, gave short talks praising the members for their work. Gustave Keller, St. retiring president, pointed out that the membership drive during the past year boosted the roll of the society to 774, making it the largest society in the Green Bay diocese. He also told of other accomplishments of the organization during the year.

Leo Rechner, incoming president, also gave a short talk asking members to keep up their spirited activities during the coming year.

The Shop Window

By PEGGY POST

Last weekend was winter all right, with even a good snow battle to my credit but there's no telling what the week will bring, perhaps more coldness with crisp snow to be scrunched through... or even the spring of last week when lighter coats in favor. Isn't it a funny world with California either snowed under or swimming and Appleton either winter or spring?

"RAVISSANT" is the cry of Agnes, noted French milliner and a good word, too, to describe the really ravishing creation of hers at PETTIBONE'S. It's a tricky new affair, hugging the head in advance spring manner... a turban of a closely woven material called sole mesh... and the devastating gesture is the group of adorable carnations clustered at the back. You'll find all sorts of adorable new things here, the latest and last edition of "what is being worn." Highlights of the hat shop say that turbans in either this sole mesh or shiny, finely woven straw are up in the world. Also saw some attractive straw trimmed felts and straws with wide, open-faced look about their brims.

A BIGGER and better men's department is the resolution at GEBEN'S that has been adopted. In the first place boys' clothing and togs are down with the grown-ups and in the second place, you'd better put on the old grey bonnet and see what you can see in the way of extraordinary bargains this week.

Now's the time to outfit the men in your family and instead of darning old socks, throw them away and get new ones! Really, it would save your time for silk and wool ones, lilies, pure silk ones and some terrible good looking rayon and silk mixtures are all going for four pairs for a dollar! Men's shirts will be sold for seventy-nine cents and I saw some of the original price tags here as high as $2!

Then there are the ties... and here's a story that is worth while. Handsome, interlined and high quality silk ties will cost those who buy 'em exactly forty cents. $1.25 for three. If your husband wears heaves or the children need new ones you'll find them here on sale, either cotton fleece lined or part wool. One of the tricky things is the new underwear ensemble for men including a white rayon shirt and colored striped broadcloth trunks. Very grand and less than a dollar.

A BIT o'scotch plaid with a cocky spinel a-sit-in' o' the top attracted my attention to the stationery table at the HOBBY HOUSE and lo and behold if it wasn't a Valentine! Not so far away, you know, and you simply will love the clever ones that are here. Sweet decorative ones, funny doggie ones and punny ones that clinch the meaning in the enjoyable illustrations.

Saw the ensemble for spring being modeled in one of the shops and it looked good to me, the extra print, matching turban and short fur jacket combination. One thing about spring, everyone appears to be smart in these new, simply lined but individually fashioned gowns.

YOU'VE heard tell before in these here rambles of the adorable Betty Baxley housefrocks that HERNER'S HOSIERY SHOP have... you know, the fitted, printed ones that have style as well as wearability. Well, my dears, here's your chance to have not only one but several... they're being specialized this week for $1 and more. Prints of all sorts, blended light tones and the attractive dark background prints that are more practical for general slip on before dinner wear.

The day is past when fashion accessories are scrupulously matched the ensemble. Rather they now enhance it by clever contrast. The whole business started, if you're interested, when tripping brown frocks appeared sporting persian green belts and necklines. Of course, the world gasped but it has taken individuality in color to its heart for the new spring season. The world's all of your own making this season!

DUSTY nooks and crannies just don't have a chance with the little electric gadget I found at GALPIN's the other day. It's a neat little cleaner, really a miniature vacuum, that the modern young (or well seasoned) housewife grasps firmly in her right hand and starts her turn of attack on the rugs, walls, furniture and anything else that has a lurking suspicion of being vanquished in the electric housecleaning party. Everything is made so easy when you have one of the hand cleaners because all you need is an electric switch, a firm hold and the light of little in your eye. You see with this there is no dust, fuss or clutter and mess that scrubbing brush - pail - hands and knees combination always bring forth.

The Story of Sue

by MARGERY HALE
© 1929 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

SUE, watching Sally avoiding the answers to the questions that were being asked her, wondered if Sally didn't realize just how completely she was giving away the fact that she was trying to screen someone. Ruth had sensed it, too.

"Why not name the man, Sally?" she asked. "It can't do any harm. If he's innocent he's clear. If he pulled off some crooked deal while he was with you, then he deserves all that he's getting to get."

"But he didn't pull off anything at all!" Sally insisted. "I was with a friend of mine from out of town, and I'm not going to get his name mixed up in anything." She bit her lips until they were a sliver, fierce red line. "Just because a car disappeared and then came back doesn't mean that we had it."

"But you left in a car, and the man who was with you didn't call for you in one," Jack volunteered. "That car must have belonged to someone at the party. Later a car came in. Someone sat in it, then disappeared. The gardener thought the man had gone into the house. Apparently my car was being returned. If you would help us clear up your angle of it, Miss Bradley, we could forget that and go on to the next clue. But as long as it's there, it balks us."

"I'll say nothing," Sally answered in a hot, stammered voice.

"You must be kidding," Miss Bradley, an officer's tones, cool, suave, but with a metallic undercurrent, answered. "At once."

"But if I do you will broadcast the name of the man to the papers and everywhere else when he's really innocent. You'll name him as a suspect of something?"

"If he isn't guilty, as you say, we'll not let his name be mentioned in any way at all," the officer promised.

"All right then. The man with me was Hal Pritchard!" Sally flung the words defiantly.

"Hal Pritchard?" Ruth's voice slipped into the silence.

"Yes. What is he to you?" Sally asked her harshly.

"Nothing at all, of course."

"You all are acting as though you expected me to say that name," Sally went on. "Nodding your heads and exchanging glances. I think I have a right to an explanation."

"You do," Jack answered. "You were at the hotel, near the rear entrance last night, around midnight, weren't you?"

"Why, yes. I was waiting for Hal. That's when he had his business to attend to."

"I thought you were. My car—at least a car that looked like mine—came along, evidently waiting for someone. It sped up and got away when it saw people coming. You admit that you were waiting there for Pritchard?"

"Sally's eyes were scornful, although her voice shook a little.

"You ought to know all about the man. You were with him, earlier in the evening, had him dated up with my sister. You haven't much room to object to my friendship with him."

"No one's objecting," Ruth interposed. "Nobody else wants him. But somebody has to be arrested and we would sort of like to get the right person."

"Then call him! Arrest him! Do it now!" Sally said angrily.

"That is exactly what we intended to do, Miss Bradley," an officer answered. "In fact, some men are bringing him along now."

Sue saw Sally gasp. She knew very well that there was something else the other girl was trying to hide. But what?

CULBERTSON on CONTRACT

by Ely Culbertson
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

DUPLICATION OF VALUES

A constant bugbear to Contract Bridge players is the ever present fear of a duplication of values—that is, one hand holds high cards of a suit and responding hand raises with adequate trump support and a void of the plain suit in which the partner holds the top. Obviously in such cases there is a duplication of values, which may result in disastrous overbidding when the partners forget that slams should only be attempted when the partners are certain they will not lose enough tricks to missing Aces to defeat the contract.

There was a hand played recently at the Cavendish Club, New York, a center of well played Contract, in which some players reached an unmakeable Grand Slam through a succession of errors, one of them being failure to take account of the publication of values.

In discussing this hand I give the bidding as it occurred, and in order to concentrate the reader's attention on the bidding problem I will not publish the East and West hands. The hand was played at Duplicate.

North-South vulnerable.
South—dealers.

Q 10 8 6 5
A K 10 4
J 7 6 5
W E
K 7
J 8 6
A J 3
A K 4 3 2

The Bidding:
(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South North
1♣ 2♣(1)
3NT(2) 4♥(3)
4NT(4) 6♣(5)
7♣(6) Pass

1—The first mistake. The minimum requirement for a Forcing Take-out is 3 honor-tricks unless the hand contains a solid trump suit or break distribution. The spade take-out is based on shaded top strength. The correct bid would have been one spade.

2—South's hand contains 3 honor-tricks above the requirement for his opening club bid, vulnerable. Misled by his partner's forcing takeout, South now overbids his hand. His correct response would be two no-trump.

3—The four heart bid, of course necessarily follows in the wake of the previous strong bidding.

4—South now affirms the possession of additional values not previously shown, a course by no means entirely unjustified.

5—North's bid for Slam would be correct if his forcing take-out had been sound.

6—South reasons that North must hold the Ace of Spades, as well as the Ace and King of hearts. He also believes that partner at the time holds the King of diamonds or a void in that suit, the latter being the most probable, as his showing of two suits and jump in clubs probably indicates a 5-4-4 distribution. The extremely strong bidding causes South to overestimate his hand.

It is, of course, apparent that North and South must lose a trick to the Ace of spades, regardless of whether or not a favorable distribution is found in the club suit.

More correct bidding of this hand would have been:

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South North
1♣ 1♥(1)
2NT 3♣(1)
3NT 4♣(2)
4NT(2) Pass

1—Despite partner's declaration that his hand is a minimum, North feels certain that there is game in the hand. The Forcing Take-out is now quite in order.

2—South, who has denied the possession of additional strength, in view of his partner's bids and his own control of the first lead of diamonds, would be justified in bidding for a small slam, which can, of course, be made if a favorable distribution is found in the trump suit.

TODAY'S POINTER

Question: What is the chief characteristic of distributional or length values?

Answer: The remainder of cards in one hand, after the other hands have been exhausted of cards of this suit are trick-taking cards.

Example: A K Q 3 2
J 10 9

After the A K Q have been played the 3 and 2 will take a trick each (Copyright, 1931, by Ely Culbertson)

EGG WHITE AND YOLK MAKE FINE BEAUTY MASK

BY ALICIA HART
Modern specialists recommend beauty masks for modern ladies' faces.

As a matter of fact, the oldest beauty remedies known are beauty masks. They, like many of the masks of today, were compounded of herbs, oils and clay.

No ancient beauty, however, possibly could need the refreshing aid of a beauty mask the way the hectic modern woman does.

If you are going somewhere and want to look top notch, try out this recipe of beauty aid.

You can buy masks all ready to apply, with directions. Or you can make your own, which takes more time and trouble but likewise has more interest for you.

The simplest mask you can concoct is the egg face mask. Break the freshest egg you can get, separate the white and yolk, beat the white up slightly and apply it thickly all over your face and neck, using upward strokes. A little brush is the best thing to apply it with. If you have some white of egg left, give your face a second coat when the first one dries.

Now use your brush and paint your face and neck with the yolk of egg. Use down the minute this is applied and go to sleep for an hour, or rest for an hour, whether you sleep or not.

At the end of that time take a soft piece of linen or wash cloth, dip it in water that is almost hot, and sponge it off. Slap on some of your most fragrant and rich nourishing cream and go over your face and neck with it. When you wipe that off, you are ready to face the world with a light heart. For your face will be so refreshed you just can't help feeling happy to see yourself looking so well.

FARM BOARD TO REDUCE COSTS TO 2 MILLION

Operations in Next Fiscal Year May Be Asset Instead of Liability

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright 1932 By Post Pub. Co.
Washington — In the search for items to cut out of the federal budget, some of the opponents of the farm board have assumed that a saving of a half billion dollars a year could be made by abolishing the board. Now they have discovered that this economy already has been made and that not more than two million dollars will be spent under the federal marketing act for the fiscal year beginning July 1 next.

Instead of a liability, requiring more funds, the farm board's operations may turn out to be a revenue asset in the next fiscal year. This is because out of the total of $500,000,000 appropriated over a three-year period, some of the money is still in the treasury of the farm board and the remainder is invested in loans on commodities and physical facilities. If all this were liquidated at present market prices, it is estimated that the treasury would get back about $250,000,000 which, of course, under federal practice would be a "miscellaneous receipt."

Because the dumping of cotton and wheat held now by the board is strenuously opposed by the members of congress from agricultural states who fear that prices would be depressed by such action, no plan to liquidate can immediately be adopted. This means that during the next 18 months, when gradual liquidation will have been undertaken, the federal farm board will be recovering the sums invested in previous years of stabilization operations. Thus even if it were desired to abandon the farm board's operations, it would be necessary to keep the machinery intact to protect the government's investment.

The administrative expense of the board last year was $1,880,000 and the new budget calls for approximately the same amount. There are no items anywhere in the federal budget, either under the farm board or under the department of agriculture, which call for further purchases of commodities by government agencies or further appropriations for loans. Loans, of course, will continue to be made out of the original $500,000,000 appropriation and it may be that when the commodities have been sold and the board has been reimbursed, the marketing organizations will insist on keeping the receipts intact as a revolving fund to be used for financing loans to them in the regular course of business instead of the in purchases on the stabilization plan.

As for the latter, the board has definitely abandoned the stabilization and has announced it will confine its operations to the making of loans to organized cooperatives as provided under existing law.

So the fight on the farm board amounts to this — there is no further economy to be made on the matter of large appropriations and the present machinery will be required to liquidate the existing loans and investments in commodities. This will not interfere with the attack on the board, whose operations probably will become a matter of political debate this year, but for all practical purposes the farm board expenditure is a thing of the past and any moneys in the future will become assets. The same holds true and available for use in future budgets as a means of offsetting other expenditures or even making a surplus.

In the years following the war there were from time to time items of revenue realized from the sale of government property which helped to swell the treasury surplus. If commodity prices should rise materially in the next two years, the farm board's operations may actually aid the federal budget.

OBJECTS TO PAYING $7 AN INCH FOR NEW 15-MILE HIGHWAY

Washington—(AP)—Representatives Simmons of Nebraska thinks $7 an inch is too much money to spend on a highway, even if it does connect the capital and the old Mount Vernon home of George Washington. He said as much when the house appropriations committee was holding hearings on the agriculture department bill which was reported today.

Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the bureau of roads, testified that something within $7,200,000 would be spent on the roadway. Simmons interposed:

"If George Washington could turn over in his grave, will be that marble casket over in Mount Vernon would crack."

The road is 15 miles long, 40 to 80 feet wide, landscaped and electrically lighted like a city street. It has just been completed.

Says Mellon Not Engaged in Private Business in Violation of Law been through a private sale and not on the public exchange market because "it was a large block."

Representative Dominick, South Carolina Democrat, suggested a list of all Mellon's stockholdings be supplied.

"It would be possible to get it but, I want to suggest the seriousness of spreading private affairs before the public," Gregg said.

Dominick's request was not pressed.

In reply to questions by Representative LaGuardia, New York Republican, Gregg said Mellon owns a minority interest in the Koppers Construction company of Pittsburgh.

Patman had called attention to this connection as giving Mellon an interest in Soviet Russia because of a business arrangement between the Koppers company of Russia.

Refers to Barco Case
Gregg named a Mr. Wallace, a vice president of the Gulf Oil company with offices in New York, as the official who negotiated the Barco concessions in Colombia. He further said Mellon was the beneficiary of the sale of his stock in A. Overholt company, a brewery, which was disposed of when the secretary took office.

Representative Oliver, New York Democrat, directed Gregg's attention to a meeting in Mellon's Washington home between the secretary and James B. Duke, prior to a merger between the Aluminum Company of America and the Canada Development and Manufacturing company.

"I asked Mr. Mellon about that," Gregg said, "and he told me the negotiations were not discussed at all. It was simply a contract between large stockholders."

"And it did not influence the negotiations," Oliver pressed.

"I cannot imagine that it did," Gregg replied.

Gregg then indicated he had concluded and Patman was given permission to reply.

Referring to Gregg's statement that Mellon owns "about 15 per cent of the Aluminum company, Patman said:

"Of course he owns more than 15 per cent."

"Mr. Gregg pointed out other securities have been stockholders. Mr. McAdoo held $10,000 worth of stock when secretary."

"Why that's insignificant. Mr. Mellon's net income amounts to as much as $100,000 a year. The total gross amount of stock held by all secretaries of the treasury before him."

He also repeated other charges he had made.

Artificially-Fed Babies In Need Of More Sunshine

Madison—Artificially fed babies need more sunshine. In a bulletin issued today the Educational Committee of the State Medical Society advises mothers to put babies in the sun to insure robust health and leave them there twice as long this time of the year as in the summer.

The bulletin declares that children who are artificially fed do not have the vitality to resist rickets and need plenty of sunlight. During the winter months babies need both sunbaths and codliver oil in order to prevent rickets and to enable their bones to develop normally, according to the Medical Society's Bulletin.

"Every mother who wishes her baby to have robust health should give him regular sunbaths from infancy until he is old enough to play in the sun himself," declares the bulletin.

"Sunbaths may begin when the baby is three or four weeks old—in warm weather, outdoors, in cold weather indoors at an open window."

"If the sun's rays are to help the baby grow properly and to prevent rickets, they must fall directly on the skin and tan it. The rays that tan the skin and prevent rickets—the ultra-violet rays—do not pass through clothing nor through ordinary window glass."

"A baby may have rickets long before his mother notices anything wrong with him. Long before his legs become badly bowed or before other deformities of the bones appear, the disease may have begun to develop. Plenty of sunlight and codliver oil at this early stage will save the baby from developing severe rickets and from such results as bone deformities and poor teeth."

"If a child's chest bones are greatly deformed by rickets, this deformity may prevent in lungs from expanding properly and he may be more subject to lung infections such as bronchitis and pneumonia. Besides, a child who has rickets is not able to throw off infections as a normal child does. Thus, although rickets itself does not cause death, it may have complications that do. A severe complication of rickets is a disease called tetany, from which the child may die."

"Longer sunbaths are needed at this time of the year because the ultra-violet rays are weak in fall and winter. A winter baby can not get enough sunshine unless he lives in the most southern and sunny parts of the country, so he especially needs codliver oil."

MANY ADDED TO LIST OF JAILED IN INDIA STRIFE

Gandhi Followers and Girl Pickets Arrested by British Officers

Bombay—(AP)—At least two score more of Mahatma Gandhi's Nationalist followers, including a group of 14 pretty, saffron-clad, Bechive girl picketers, were jailed by the British government today as it continued its repression of the civil disobedience campaign.

The 14 girls were arrested outside the government mint for trying to prevent the shipment of gold to the United States and to England, where it has been flowing in a steady stream recently. The news of these arrests caused great excitement in the bazaars and other girls immediately took the picketers' places.

Fourteen other Nationalists, including the so-called dictator of the local branch of the congress, were arrested as they followed the Mahatma's command to make their own salt and while they were scooping salt from the sea to make the salt.

The police swooped down and onlookers jeered as the officers confiscated the sea water and the utensils in which it was being scooped and boiled. Penalties for making salt range up to two years imprisonment at hard labor.

Syed Abdullah, editor of the Bombay Chronicle, most important Nationalist newspaper in India, and a close friend of Gandhi, was sentenced to two years imprisonment at hard labor for ignoring an order requiring him to report daily to the police. He said his self-respect and dignity would not allow him to make the report, "like an ordinary criminal."

Seventeen congress followers, including two women, were arrested at Poona. The women were the so-called dictators of the Maharashtra congress and the Youth League. The head of the latter organization was sent here to organize a campaign among local cultivators. She was sentenced immediately to 12 months in jail on a charge of making a serious speech.

To forestall the arrest of their picketers, the Nationalists began today to use posters, on which appeared Great Britain's own slogan: "Buy Only Home Manufactured Articles." The posters, flaming red, were plastered all over the city. They urged the people to "practice national economy and follow the British example, use only native-made goods."

"Mahatma Gandhi approves," the poster added. These exhortations are entirely within the law and police found themselves unable to make arrests for hanging the signs, even under the newest special ordinances.

Ask American to Leave
G. B. Halstead, a missionary and social director at the Luncheon Christian college, was the first American to fall under the ban of the new ordinances. He was requested to leave India because of an article he wrote for the Indian social reformer after Gandhi's arrest calling upon the missionaries and Christians in India to pledge themselves to support the Gandhi campaign.

Upon the receipt of the order to express and develop to the greatest extent its cultural, spiritual

Special to Post-Crescent
Manawa—The Manawa high school basketball team maintained its perfect record for the 1931-1932 season here Friday night by defeating Amherst 23 to 15, but it was only after a hard fought battle against a well coached quintet that gave the Wolves their record. Five baskets from the field by Guerin, and Lindow's accuracy on the free throw line gave Manawa their advantage, although some splendid defensive play, particularly in the final quarter, held Amherst at bay. Thompson and L. Benson starred for the visitors. By virtue of the victory, Manawa holds a two-game lead in the Central Wisconsin conference, southern section. League standings:

Relief Now Almost Before You Know It

If you want quick relief from a cold, go back to first principles and use something you know does the business—don't start "trying" a lot of fancy ideas or remedies. Even a "little" cold is too dangerous to take chances on.

Get Hill's Cascara Quinine. A scientific formula made to do ONE THING WELL: to knock a cold in a jiffy, not to cure a hundred different things.

Take two tablets now. Then follow directions on box. Drink lots of water, too—that's all. Soon those mean, aching pains in head and body begin to go; the cold breaks up; poisons leave your system. Almost before you know it, you feel like a new person.

If it doesn't do that, your money back. Get a box now. You'll be surprised at the speed with which it works. Costs only a few cents.

by Zane Grey

SYNOPSIS: Trueman Rock finds many obstacles in the path of his love for Thiry Preston. Amy Dabb pursues him. Thiry's father has the reputation of being a cattle rustler. And Ash, Thiry's brother, has sworn vengeance on any cowboy interested in Thiry, and has threatened to follow her to Amy's masquerade.

"Traitor!" a woman whispered. He looked around from the disappearing Amy to see Thiry close at hand, coming alone.

"Come. The rest is yours," she said, and took his arm.

"Only one I know of, Amy Dabb.

"Humph! She has a nasty tongue."

as I well know. . . . Thiry, I reckon there's not a young man at this dance who wouldn't ring weddin'-bells for you."

"Rash, flattery, Trueman," she retorted. "There must be many. I know five boys who are madly in love with their prospective part-

"Five? . . . You mean six!" rejoined Rock.

"Thiry, I make number six," said Rock, and quickly looked away, too guilty to dare to see how she took

"You broke your word. You make me remember," Thiry said, reproachfully.

Again they strolled under the magic rose and purple of the dimming lanterns, and on to the secluded bower in the patio.

"Trueman, you must take me home soon," she said, as if coming out of a spell.

"Oh no, not now. Just one more

"But I'd forgotten. Ash will come any moment."

"Well, then—one more."

forgot again or could not resist the joy of the hour. Once more Rock led her to their shadowed corner.

Then she was unmasked under his worshipping eyes, under the dim light of the lantern above and the far, white, and knowing stars. Once she lifted her eyes to him—eyes that betrayed the spell of the moment—then no more.

"How can I? . . . I'm holding your hand."

"Oh, so you are!—Well, let go."
"Pull it away," he whispered.
daringly.
But she did not.

Rock won her to stay one more dance, reveled in his power to persuade her, though his conscience flayed him.

They reached the potia. Something had happened as Rock-

"Hey, look out ther!" called

"He got mine," added another

Rock drew Thiry to the right, out of the press. Suddenly into the open space be fore him leaped a little figure of a cowboy, wearing a red handkerchief as a mask. He was as quick as light. One sweep of hand tore Thlry's mask from her white face.

The cowboy appeared to leap up.
He snatched off the red handkerchief that masked him, to disclose the livid face of Ash Preston. His evil eyes, like coals of blue fire, flashed over her face, her spreading ruffled gown.

"Ash," gasped Thiry, clutching Rock's arm tighter, "meet Senor del Toro—my masquerade partner!"

"Senor 'ell!" he bit out, incredulously cold and fierce. Like a snake's head his hand shot out, to fasten in Thibault's dress and tear it with fangs.

LAWRENCE college basketball team will swing into Big Four competition again Tuesday evening when one of the season's basketball gems is placed on exhibition. The game is the annual Lawrence-Carroll game and new Alexander gymnasium of the college is the scene.

Despite the fact the Vikes have lost a game in Big Four competition, the team is not out of running and is primed for the visit of Messrs. VanderMuhlen, Hincley and company. The Ripon game was "one of those things" as far as the Vikes are concerned and they now look forward to setting down the Pioneers.

RESERVED SEATS
A block of 100 reserved seats have been placed on sale for the Lawrence-Carroll basketball game tomorrow night. They will be on sale at the local drug store. Lawrence and Carroll freshman teams will play the curtain raiser at 7 o'clock.

ple in gods on a basketball court. rather they are just a couple good performers. The Pioneers will have one edge over Lawrence, however, they have watched the Vikes play this season while Lawrence hasn't been fortunate to have as adequately scouted the Waukesha schoolers.

Both Lawrence and Carroll played Saturday evening. The Pioneers indulged in Big Four competition and gave Beloit a merry pasting 30 to 12 as recounted in another column. A second half rally accounted for the Pioneer victory. Lawrence, in the meantime was wallowing. Carroll, led by Vernon, Ia., out at the gym, 38 and 15.

Indications are Lawrence's lineup will be intact for Tuesday night's game. Benny Rafoth, who broke his nose a week ago, played a few minutes Saturday night against Carroll and will be ready to go against the Pioneers. That being the case Lawrence probably will show Rafoth at center, Colbert and Hall forwards and Haase and Vanderbloemen as guards.

Carroll's lineup appears to be VanderMuhlen at center, Hincley and Jansen, at forwards, and Clark and Johnston guards. Jansen started in the first game, getting the majority of points. All the boys except Jansen and Johnston have been with the Pioneers at least two years.

Vikes Wallop Cornell
Lawrence's victory over Cornell, although impressive from the point of view of the score, occasional bursts of playing and good work under the hoop also had local features. First of all the Vikes appeared guilty of a terrible lot of bad passing, often catching the ball off their chest, stomachs, and picking it off the floor a couple times before getting hold of it.

Cornell showed the effects of a grueling battle with Ripon Friday night at Ripon and Brandau, one of the team's best guards was on the bench with a bad ankle. Under the basket the Vikes used their height to great advantage but they had to do a tall lot of tapping to get the ball through the hoop.

The Vikes started fast after Colbert sank a free throw. Hall, Colbert, Hall and Vanderbloemen followed with field goals in the order named and Lawrence was leading 9 and 2. The half ended with the score 18 and 10 for Lawrence.

In the second half the Vikes found the going even better than in the first. Cornell's offense just wasn't going and the Iowans freed both five points, all via the free throw line. In the meanwhile Lawrence was pounding along pushing up the total despite the fact Coach Arthur C. Denney was sending in reserves and pulling his players in a manner most reminiscent of a Notre Dame football team.

Bill Colbert beat forward, led the scoring with ten points, Hall had seven and Haase and Vanderbloemen six each. Haase was the only Vike to play the entire game. Denney used 11 different men during the evening.

KIMBERLY RALLIES TO BEAT MILWAUKEE CAGE QUINT, 35-25

Du Pont, Center, Scores Three Field Goals in Final Period

Special to Post-Crescent

Kimberly — The Kimberly Club cagers, displaying the best brand of basketball this season, won the nod over the strong Milwaukee Badgers in a nip and tuck affair at the Kimberly clubhouse Saturday evening by a 35 to 25 count. Although the score gives the Papermakers a ten point lead at the end of the tussle, it was forced to fight all the way. Du Pont, the Kimberly pivot man, who so far this season has not done very much offensively broke loose and hoisted the leather through the hoop three times from scrimmage to give the club a winning margin.

The game got under way as Gossens dribbled through and sank his shot. Crabl of the Badgers retaliated with a long shot. Kimberly again shot into the lead when Busch made his free throw count and shortly afterward dribbled into the basket for a pot shot. The quarter ended with the Papermakers still in the lead 7 to 5.

Le May opened the second period for the Clubbers with a field goal from the free throw line. The Badgers came to life when Crabl made his free throw on Du Ponts personal and then Peters followed the leather through the hoop for a field goal. Du Pont closed the half with a field goal just before the whistle making the score 15 to 11 for Kimberly.

The third period was fast with either team having an advantage, and ended with the score 21 and 17. Within a minute from the start of the final period the Milwaukee team staged a rally and field goals by Chess, Peters and Gaase gave the Badgers the lead for the first time. The lead was short lived for at this stage Du Pont, the Clubbers' center, ran wild and sank three field goals and a free try while Gossens rang up a field goal and three free tries. Le May also swished a neat one in from the side to conclude the scoring for the Clubbers.

ST. JOHN QUINTET WINS BY FORFEIT
St. John's Catholic high school basketball team of Little Chute won a forfeit game from St. Peter high of Oshkosh Friday evening at Little Chute. If the forfeit is allowed to stand the game will go down as a 2-0 victory for the Chuters.

Showing a big, rangy squad, St. Peter five took the lead on the first tip off. The Chuters tied the count and the period ended 2 and 2. In the second quarter Hammen hit the hoop twice for the Chuters and Oshkosh connected once, the half ending 6 and 4.

The third quarter saw Wildenberg score on a one handed shot and Oshkosh score a free throw. Ebersole's score was over the Oshkosh coach objected to a decision of the referee and ordered his team from the floor. The Catholic league plays W. I. A. A. rules and the refusal to continue play automatically gave St. John a 1 and 0 win.

When the game ended the score book showed St. Peter leading 2 and 0. Hammen with two field goals and A. Hammen with two field goals each for Little Chute.

The powerful professional from Cuver City, Calif., outgamed one of the greatest gamblers of golf, Gene Sarazen, to win the third annual Agua Caliente open and his $5,000 prize money yesterday.

A spectacular sub-par round of 69 on the first day, 74 on the second, 65, equal to the course record, on the third eighteen, plus 73 on the last gave Morrison a 72-hole total of 284, four strokes better than par.

Playing in the same three-some with the steady Sarazen, who finished second to win $2,500 and Giln Dutra of Santa Monica, Calif., Morrison staged a determined finish as the victor by two strokes.

Dutra came in third with a 287, still one better than par, and took away third prizes of $1,500.

Wherein Badger Lawmakers And U. W. Faculty Members Match Wits On Athletics

And Legislators Learn Error in Knowledge of Certain Details

SOMETIME this week the University of Wisconsin sports council, regents, the special legislative committee and other groups will meet to decide just what was revealed in the hearings, resignations, arguments and parleys that Wisconsin and her athletics have been subject of during the last week.

Be that as it may. But looking over some of the comments and questions passed last week, as recorded by Henry J. McCormick, sports editor of the State Journal, Madison, it would seem that George Little was all right with the U. W. faculty until he turned against Thistlethwaite and that he then was asked to quit.

It also seems Madison has resented the action of the legislative investigation committee and some of the more or less pertinent questions asked. One of the more insistent questioners was Oscar Schmieg, Appleton, assemblyman from the first district of Outagamie-co and assistant district attorney of Outagamie-co, as Mr. McCormick vividly points out several times in his story.

Beginning with Wednesday's hearings, here are a few paragraphs from McCormick's typewriter:

"Assemblymen Krez and Young questioned Professor Kowalke more or less perfunctorily but Assemblyman Schmieg, an assistant district attorney of Outagamie county, by the way, shot question after question at Professor Kowalke only to have the latter pick them up pieces

Post-Crescent, Wash. Bureau
 Washington—Federal aid for barberry eradication during the 1933

fiscal year is scheduled for a $180,740 slash below appropriations for the current fiscal year in the agriculture appropriations bill for 1983 reported to congress today by the appropriations committee.

Under provisions of the bill, barberry eradication projects are slated to receive $126,400 from Uncle Sam during the 1933 fiscal year. This is $36,600 less than the $200,000 provided in the budget, notwithstanding that witnesses at the agriculture sub-committee hearings urged the necessity of an allotment of $50,000 additional to avert the danger of an epidemic of black-stem rust, which is spread by the barberry plant.

BRIDGE OPENED TO TRAFFIC BY KAUKAUNA CITY

Elaborate Ceremony Satur- day Afternoon Marks Official Opening

Kaukauna — Traffic was allowed to cross the new Lawest bridge here for the first time Saturday afternoon when the structure which spans the Fox river, was opened with an elaborate ceremony. Talks were given by John D. Lawe, Kaukauna's oldest resident; John Reynolds, attorney general of Wisconsin; Mayor B. W. Fargo, and Harry D. Meyers of the Meyer Construction Co.

The bridge was officially opened at 2:50 p. m. with the cutting of a ribbon by Miss Margaret Fargo, daughter of the mayor. Miss Fargo was assisted by Misses Jean Charlesworth, Ruth Ludtke, Ardythe Wiesler, Peggy Nelson, and Joan Mayer. In cutting the ribbon Miss Fargo dedicated the new structure to the fathers and mothers of the state of Wisconsin, Outagamie-co., and the city of Kaukauna, for the efforts in making the bridge a possibility.

Meeting at Hotel Kaukauna, a parade was formed, and the column passed through the principal streets of the city, led by the American legion colors and the Kaukauna high school band. Included in the front lines was the legion troop and firing squad. The parade advanced to the north approach of the new span, where the salute was fired by the legion squad. The line then moved across the bridge, when the ribbon was cut. After parading the principal thoroughfares on the city's south side, the marchers again crossed the structure, and continued to the city auditorium where the program was resumed.

Mayor Opens Program

Mayor B. W. Fargo opened the program in the auditorium, before a capacity crowd, with an explanation of the dedication of the bridge to the fathers and mothers. He also told of the inscribed plate, which will be placed on the new structure. It will bear the word, "Dedicated To The Fathers and Mothers Of The State of Wisconsin; Whose Courage, Industry, and Self Sacrifice Have Made This Structure Possible."

Thanking the members of the state highway commission, the county highway committee, the immediate predecessors to his administration, the engineering and construction contractors, C. R. Meyer and Sons Construction Co. of Oshkosh, and the citizens of Kaukauna for the part they played in assisting the city to obtain the new span, Mayor Fargo presented John D. Lawe, after whom the bridge was named.

A history of bridges across the Fox river here was given by Mr. Lawe, whose father built the first span across the river here. This first bridge was known as a "corduroy" bridge he said, and was used chiefly by farmers. It was washed away with the raising of the water level in the river following construction of a dam about 1850, he said. Means of crossing then was by wading through a shallow spot near the present site of the Outagamie Paper mill, Mr. Lawe pointed out.

Proud of Bridge

"The citizens of Kaukauna, as well as those throughout the entire valley, will appreciate the completion of this new structure," Mr. Lawe said. "A number of fine bridges span the river up and down the valley, but few of them compare to this handsome structure."

Harry D. Meyers, a representative of the construction firm in charge of the actual work, presented the new bridge to the state highway commission with Thomas J. Pattison, chairman of the commission, receiving the new structure. Meyers then presented the bridge to the county highway committee, with County Highway Commissioner Frank Appleton accepting. Mayor B. W. Fargo accepted the bridge from Meyers on behalf of the city of Kaukauna.

That the bridge was completed in 20 days less than the contract called for was pointed out by Mr. Meyers. He complimented the Wisconsin bridge department in furnishing plans which required no changes, and the city of Kaukauna for its cooperation.

T. J. Pattison complimented the city on its high school band. Following the close of the program, selections again were played by the band. C. R. Thibault is director of the band organization, and Miss Allegra Sullivan is drum major.

Monument To City

"Erected at a cost of nearly $250,000, this new Lawest bridge is a monument to the city of Kaukauna," declared Attorney General John Reynolds.

"Good highways are like education in the development of civilization, and no highway is complete without a structure of this kind. Bridges are a part of all our highways."

He lauded the state highway commission, the county highway committee, the county board, city officials of Kaukauna, Meyer Construction Co., and the Wisconsin Bridge and Iron Co., for the part each played in the bridge construction. Praise also was lent to the men who toiled in the actual construction, and the engineers who inspected the construction.

Reviewing a number of bridges built across the rivers in Wisconsin during the past few years, Reynolds declared that the Kaukauna span is the third largest project attempted in the state during the past few years. He added that Outagamie-co. was the first county in the state to build concrete roads, thereby setting an example for the rest of the state.

Members of the program committee and others who assisted in carrying it out, were thanked by Mayor B. W. Fargo. A lunch was served in the Elks hall on Second-st for the visitors.

Kaukauna's share was $40,000, Outagamie-co.'s $60,000, and the state the remainder. Henry Sparby was resident engineer, assisted by Robert Martin. Dan Holman was in charge of the crews and was assisted during the construction period by C. Driessen and D. Beavers.

BOARD PRAISES USE OF IODINE TABLETS

Madison—(AP) In reply to a query from an upstate public health worker, the state board of health today issued a statement expressing superiority of iodine tablets over iodized table salt for providing a goiter preventive for children.

"Several years ago," the board said, "a large number of samples of iodized salt were purchased from the shelves of local groceries of various parts of the state, and these samples analyzed in the chemistry department of the University of Wisconsin."

"No two samples were found to contain the same amount of iodine; many of them contained none at all and one or two samples showed a much larger percentage than was indicated on the label."

"The results would indicate iodized salt does not retain its full quota of iodine for any great length of time. This fact coupled with the fact that no two individuals use the same amount of salt would make it practically impossible to determine the dosage that would be received by an individual."

"While the amount of iodine obtained through the use of iodized salt might be sufficient to prevent incipient goiter in the growing child there would be no way of establishing this fact with any degree of certainty."

Your Birthday

WHAT TOMORROW MEANS TO YOU

By MARY BLAKE
"CAPRICORN"

If January 19th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m., from 4:50 p. m. to 6 p. m. and from 9:15 p. m. to 10:40 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:40 a. m. to 9 a. m., and from 2 p. m. to 3:15 p. m.

Very peculiar and subtle influences will play their part in your life on this January 19th, and the best of efforts and the clearest of reasoning will end in disappointing results. Those in love will find "Cupid" is a casuist, a mystic and a cabalist.

Children born on this January 19th will have a great deal of character, considerable backbone and positive ideas. They will be fiery and energetic, and will speak their mind, and so after things they want. They will not take kindly and submissively to the snubs of the world.

The woman born January 19th will not lead a spectacular life, but will usually accomplish in a quiet, mouse-like way, that to which she has set her hand. You will never be treated as an ornament, and will not wish to be. Your outlook and comprehension of things in general is more masculine than feminine. You are not a person who is easily led, and treat the opinions of others with rather a contempt. You are not a woman to whom to address mere drawing-room generalities, and those insults to the feminine comprehension which a bygone age generally called compliments. You know the human heart, and do not often make psychological mistakes. Your ability to foresee proper reactions to given causes and effects is strongly to your favor.

The man born January 19th will have a very just nature, and in his relationships with others will always be able to rise above small differences of opinions. You will be as discreet as you are secretive. The darkest of secrets are safe in your custody. Your conversation is usually limited to the statements of the barest facts, and is seldom garnished with colorful details. You are allied to those who worship the open air and vigorous sports. You will fall in love slowly, but "head over heels" when you do.

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu.
